ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

Their latest change of plans makes little sense. They still intend to trade "good" books for "undesirable" comics, and destroy the comics.

But they are not going to burn the comic books, as they originally planned. They are going to destroy them some other way, because book-burning looks bad.

What on earth difference does it make whether the books are burned, jettisoned at sea, or thrown into a termites' nest to be eaten? They are still going to be destroyed.

In their concern for the way the books will be destroyed, the "Jaycees" show a curious attitude of mind.

They show themselves to be more worried about appearances than about principles. It seems they are afraid people will notice them dancing around the flames.

Destroying any kind of book—even a trashy one—is a serious act. It is the murder of someone's thoughts (worthless thoughts, perhaps) and the beginning of censorship.

It is a project to be undertaken (if at all) by thinkers and scholars, and only after much heart-searching.

I have met several members of the Junior Chamber, and found them amiable persons. They put on a fine B.C. Products Fair (or Canadian Products Fair, or World Products Fair, whatever they are going to call it). They're the smartest gardeners who ever sank a trowel in the Inner Harbor turf.

But I am not convinced that the members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce know good books from bad books, or that they have the wisdom to sit in judgment on such matters.

I know I haven't the wisdom for it. That's why I would refuse to have a part in any such project, and if I belonged to an organization that embarked upon it, I would resign rather than lend it my support.

That is one man's opinion, but I speak for some others as well.

1. What kind of books, if any, did you read when you were a child?
2. Did you turn out to be a good citizen all the same?
3. If not, why not?
4. What was the last book, of any kind, that you read?
5. Who committed the murder?

Wife's Faith Never Faltered

This was a little faster pace than the one at which the Seven Little Sisters traveled.

Teddy, my wife, was waiting at the New York airport. It was a moment of tremendous happiness. I'd last seen her four months before on June 22, as I prepared to go to sea from Callao. Much had happened in that time.

Much Help

I owed a great deal to a great many people for the success of my voyage; indeed, I would not have been able to make it if I had not been fortunate enough to make many friends and meet many people who helped me. First was my friend Werner Woehlk, of Milford, Conn. He gave financial help. Then there was Dr. Jose Chiriboga, Ecuador's ambassador to Washington, who arranged introductions I needed so I could find the balsa logs to build the Seven Little Sisters. Henri Kohn, a New Yorker, let me build the raft near his balsa mill at Guayaquil. Duran Ballen, Ecuador's consul-general in New York, introduced me to Kohn. Each step of the way, I needed, and found, help like that.

American Consul-General Churchill Hutton gave me valuable assistance in Ecuador. The ambassador to Peru, Harold Tittmann, and Consul Bernard F. Heller were ever-helpful in Peru. The entire staff of the Peruvian navy, from Minister Roque Saldias down, were more than willing to help a lone American go against the Pacific. There was Vice-Admiral and Chief of Staff Guillermo Tirado and the other Peruvian navy officers who'd stuck with me—Capt. Abraham Woll-Davila, Capt. Saldias, the minister's son; Captain Revedenera, Commandante Alejandro Martinez. There were the Ecuadoreans, working on the river and in the forests, who counseled me about the problems of balsa. There were Governor and Mrs. Lowe . .

I have a great many debts I can never repay.

Tried Harder

And my wife? She had kept faith in my journey, and her faith had never wavered.

I was now able to learn of her activities on my behalf. Week after week had passed and those on land who were listening for my radio messages heard nothing. Teddy was determined that efforts to get news of me should not lag—that even greater ones should be made.

I owe her a debt for this faith in me. I had told her that I would certainly come back, and she refused to have any doubts.

Before leaving Callao I told the Peruvian Navy I would radio my position at least once a day—at 11 a.m. or 6 p.m.—using the emergency marine wavelengths of 500 and 8364 kilocycles. The navy promised to keep a man on duty 24 hours a day throughout the trip to receive these and any other messages. News would be forwarded to Washington, and sent on to my wife.

Days went by and my radio failed to carry out its end of the bargain. My wife set out on a course of supplementary action. She wrote the U.S. Navy hydrographic office in Washington, so that a notice that I was adrift would be printed in the daily bulletin that goes to shipmasters of the South Pacific. She wrote the National Maritime Union, of which I am a member, and its affiliates, asking that radio operators in the region I was sailing be requested to keep alert for messages identified by the call letters, 7HTAS, taken from Siete Hermanitas, Spanish for the Seven Little Sisters.

No Alarm

But weeks passed without news of me. Teddy was not alarmed, she insists, but rather thought that enough was not being done to reach me. She wrote the Radio Relay League of America, the "ham" organization which has friends all over the world. She asked that any radio operators in the area where I was sailing be notified. The league responded to her request, sending copies of Teddy's letter to radio amateurs in Honolulu, Tahiti, Rarotonga and Pitcairn Island.

While approaching the main Samoan island of Tutuila, I radioed a request that a boat be sent to show me the way through the reef. I'd sent the request many times before, but my messages had not been received. I had no reason to expect that this one would find a listener.

But on the British island of Rarotonga, 650 miles to the southeast, a "ham" named Doug Cunnold was listening. He was at his set because a copy of my wife's letter had reached still another Rarotonga radio operator named Doug Berry, who had notified Cunnold he should be alert for a message from me. It was through Cunnold's efforts that the information was passed along to Pago Pago.

Governor Lowe sent a ship to search for me and bring me safely to land; my wife's faith had achieved long-range results. When I landed at Hawaii, a woman in the crowd, another "ham," showed me a copy of my wife's letter. There, too, radio sets had been tuned to my wavelength.

Go Again?

For the future I am planning to do some more writing and have an operation for the hernia I suffered in Ecuador. It seems very long ago, the day when I hurled myself against a boat which seemed determined to crush my raft. Many times since returning I have been asked, "Any more raft voyages?" Not right away, certainly. But, knowing myself, I have a feeling that some other project will come up, and I'll go back to assembling balsa logs or making some other long-distance preparations.

My successful return to New York has brought an unexpected problem. Meekie, a cat which could cross the Pacific without once losing her dignity, has turned out to be frightened to death of dogs and cars. But she's boss of our household, and in time I hope she will become a seasoned city dweller. Perhaps she needs time to recover from the long trip home.

Governor Lowe's wife gave me a native basket as a cat-carrying case and everywhere we landed Meekie became the centre of interest. The crowded return journey must have been quite a strain for a ten-month-old cat which had spent four months of her life alone on a raft with a man and a parrot.

Why did I go to sea on the Seven Little Sisters?

Now that it is all over, and some of the impressions are beginning to fade, I sometimes ask myself in the night's stillest moments why I built the raft and made the voyage. I am asked this almost daily. To me the answer is not hard to find.

Let me say again what I have tried to make clear before. It was not a stunt—or an adventure either. Unlike the great Kon-Tiki expedition, I wanted to prove no theory. Nor did I wish to discover or set up a formula for others to follow.

Just Personal

To me, built as I am, the trip was much more. All my life I have stuck close to nature and had great faith in nature. I felt I could count on nature and the voyage across the Pacific was a test of myself, and my philosophy. This of course means faith, and my voyage was a test of faith. It was purely a personal affair.

On the Pacific, there were moments when that faith might have been strained. The hardest moment was when illness struck me early in the voyage and I radioed an SOS. It was, indeed, the most difficult moment of my life.

But the happiest moment followed quickly—when the pain had gone, and I knew I could go on.

My greatest disappointment came when I found I could not land on American Samoa, the destination I'd selected, and had to turn away into the night toward the British islands. And this, too, was followed by a change for the better. For of course the climax, and the greatest pleasure, came with my landing in American Samoa.

Life on the Seven Little Sisters was unpredictable. Moment to moment, battling wind and seas and calms and other problems, I found many, sudden changes. Some of these moments brought hardships and others, pleasure in the beauty I found around me. Which emerges clearest, now that it is in the past?

At moments of greatest calm, when reflections emerge of their own accord, I recollect most clearly the hours I sailed—alone in all the world—under the most beautiful canopy of stars I have ever seen.

Blind Attorney Conquers Barrier

Without Braille or guide dog, he learned a law degree in five years at the University of Idaho, passed the bar examination and became the most inspirational student the school has seen in years.

He was surrounded by close friends who read him his lessons, and even took him on dates because the handsome, 27-year-old, five-foot-nine Turner had an engaging personality and a quick wit.

He has left them behind now and returned to Twin Falls, where the wonderful world he had just begun to know suddenly went black in 1932.

His mother had brought home a surprise from town, a package just for him, bound in tight cord. Harry ran for a butcher knife, slipped it under the cord and pulled up hard.

The knife snicked through the string and slashed into his eyes. He never saw what was in the box.

He was sent off to a school for the blind, but hated it and resented the handicap.

At 12, his father took him to the regular junior high school in Twin Falls and Harry was accepted with some misgivings. But he became a whiz at methematics.

Fortunately, Curt Turner was pretty well off, and he could afford to send his boy to college. Harry enrolled at Utah State in political science and got elected to the student council.

Friends read to him daily. He graduated with a C-plus average, although he had to take some courses twice, then licked the bar exam.

Harry Turner had made the grade.

FIFTY YEARS' EVOLUTION IN BETTER HEARING

Today, if you need hearing help you may use a small, light instrument to increase, in your ear, essential sounds. Fifty years ago, very little to help you. Now there are two PARAVOX All-Transistor Hearing Aids that are helping hundreds to hear better again.

Why don't you, if your hearing is failing, try one? It may bring new joy, new happiness to you. It will cost you nothing to find out if you can be helped.

How To Spot Inferior Birch

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Birch Trees—(J.L.C., Sooke): If you have reason to suspect that the small trees you bought as paper birches are really the common grey birch, you can make sure by rubbing the bark. The chalky witness will rub off the paper birch, but not off the grey. However, I don't think any reputable nurseryman would make such a substitution, as his good name is his principal stock in trade.

Actually, for the first three years, the grey birch has whiter bark than the paper birch, and it is only as the tree becomes mature that the latter develops the full silvery beauty of its bark. The grey birch is a poor thing in comparison, but at least it has the virture of thriving in soil so poor that no other tree would grow.

Another way of telling the two apart is by the dark markings. The bark of the paper birch has horizontal black stripe-like marks, while the grey birch is marked with clearly defined triangular black patches or "monkey faces," as the children call them.

Red Spider Mite—(E.S.P., Victoria): The tiny red creatures which you found on your carnations when you brought them into the house are red spider mites. These are the same pests which are now attacking your potted grapefruit plant, and I don't think there is much doubt that the infestation came from the carnations.

Ordinary insecticides aren't much good against this little pest, but there is a preparation called Malathion which gives a good kill. Mix it with water according to the directions on the bottle, and swab it on both sides of the leaves. If you have any trouble in securing the Malathion, try swabbing the webs away with soapy water, then dusting with sulphur.

It is hard to believe that a creature so small as to be almost invisible to the naked eye could do so much damage, but these mites multiply so rapidly and suck the sap so voraciously that the leaves will sicken, turn yellow and die.

Corp Culture—(J.B.B., Nanaimo):—Your failure last year was due to sowing your corn too early, before the soil had warmed up. With the cold, wet spring we had, the seed rotted in the ground before it could germinate.

The early Indian had a neat trick for determining when to sow their corn. The squaws would catch themselves a young buck, strip off his G-string, and force him to sit down on the bare earth. If he shivered, it was too early to plant.

If you haven't an Indian handy next spring to test the temperature of your soil, use your hands, or the inside surface of your wrist, the way a young mother tests the bath water for the baby.

If the ground feels cold and clammy, wait until it warms up before sowing. It is always a good idea to shake up the seed in a bag with a pinch or two of mercuric seed dressing, such as Ceresan, which gives some protection against the rot organisms in the soil. This stuff is poisonous, though, so don't smoke on the job, keep your hands away from your mouth or eyes, and wash them thoroughly after handling the treated seed.

If it is important to your ego to pick a few ears of corn a week or so ahead of your next door neighbor, you can use cloches, Hotcaps or even upended jam jars over each seed. Place the Hotcaps or whatever you use in position a week before sowing the seed, so they will trap the sun and warm up the soil.

Alger Hiss Vows To Clear Name

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Alger Hiss, looking grim and rather haggard but appearing confident, walked to freedom Saturday, asserting he was "completely innocent" of charges that he helped communist spies.

A stretch of 3½ years behind the bars of Lewisburg Prison ended with an avowal by the 50-year-old former state department aide that he meant to "vindicate my name" of the stigma of a conviction for perjury. He had denied before a federal grand jury that he never gave state department secrets to Red spies.

Hiss was sentenced to five years but won a parole, as provided under the law, because of good behavior. He'll have to report monthly to a federal officer for the next year and a half.

CAREFUL REPLY

When he emerged from the prison he was peppered by waiting reporters with questions about his past and future. Hiss carefully framed his answer:

"I am very glad to use this chance," he said, "the first I have had in nearly four years, to reassert my complete innocence of the charges that were brought against me by Whittaker Chambers."

Chambers, formerly a senior editor of Time Magazine, accused Hiss of being a member of a Communist Party group. Chambers accused Hiss also of turning over secret state department documents.

At the prison Hiss' wife, son and two lawyer friends walked with him through the main gate. Moments later Hiss was engulfed in waves of reporters and photographers.

He spoke nearly two minutes, then reporters fired questions at him.

Hiss gave no hint as to his future plans. He turned aside questions whether he planned to write a book and what he would say if called again by a congressional committee.

"For nearly four years I have had no opportunity to answer the fantastic inventions that politicians and members of the press have been free to invent about me," Hiss asserted.

Find $6,000 Gems

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP)—Nunzia Mastrantuone, his grandson and their dog went for a walk Friday and came back with a suitcase containing $6,000 worth of jewelry. They found it in the woods. Police identified the jewelry as loot from a burglary here Wednesday.

PORT ALBERNI—The herring fleet is in Port Alberni for the second week end of the season with reports of slow fishing in Barkley Sound and vicinity.

The fleet of about 35 boats, including packers, seiners, tenders, and take-off boats, arrived Friday and most of the 200-odd men left to return to their homes in the Vancouver-New Westminster area for the week end.

Several packers are in port, but the small number of fish does not warrant a trip to the processing plants on the Mainland.

Soldier, Statesman, Author, Artist, Bricklayer

For more than half a century the voice of Sir Winston Churchill has been heard around the world, sometimes as a prophet of impending war, sometimes as a critic of domestic issues, for long years as inspired leader of a beleaguered island, always as an advocate of close co-operation between the free nations of the western world. As his 80th birthday nears, his energies and talents find outlet in painting, writing and bricklaying. Always a rebel against what he considered wrong, he saw realization of his dream of Commonwealth-U.S. partnership in the Second World War. First Lord of the Admiralty for part of the First World War and prime minister during the Second World War, he personifies British determination and perseverance. These pictures show Sir Winston at various stages of his colorful career. Centre, he is wartime prime minister. In other photos he is shown as honorary doctor of laws at the University of Edinburgh; in the siren suit he made famous in the Second World War; painting near Calais, France; in the uniform of air commodore of the RAF; just after he had flown across the English Channel in 1914; as an observer during British-French army manoeuvres in France in 1910; as he appeared on his 1952 visit to Ottawa, and as he won the 1951 general election.

Hospitals' 'Sweep' Proposed for B.C.

Officials, seriously concerned over the grave problem of hospital finances, came out in unanimous favor of the establishment of a miniature-style Irish Sweep for B.C.

The question will now be referred to the B.C. Hospital Association and from there it will go to the annual convention.

ENDORSATION ASKED

The resolution was first passed by the hospitals' women's auxiliaries which asked for endorsation from the original meeting.

The Irish Sweep, which collects thousands of dollars for Irish Hospitals every year, is run on the system of one-quarter total ticket sales going to the hospitals and the remaining three-quarters being awarded in prizes.

At the same meeting Dr. Larry Giovando, MLA for Nanaimo, advocated a dual hospital system for the province.

He said there were many chronic cases in beds meant for acute cases. Convalescent hospitals should be opened for the chronic cases enabling seriously ill people to benefit from the expensive equipment that hospitals now have.

Nanaimo Salutes Daring Pioneers

BY ALEC MERRIMAN
Colonist Staff Reporter

NANAIMO—Aunts and uncles, nephews and nieces, dozens of cousins, and distant relatives galore met here yesterday — some for the first time.

They were among the 300 descendants gathered to see a re-enactment of the landing 100 years ago of the "Princess Royal" pioneers.

Three thousand others mingled with them to see Nanaimo actors and actresses take the parts of the tiny band of travel-weary pioneers who stepped ashore on the same Pioneer Rock 100 years ago to the hour—11 a.m., November 27, 1854.

It was an emotional pageant and many an old-timer's eye and youngster's, too, filled with tears as the "pioneers" landed in three whalers.

But just as emotional and impressive was a gathering of descendants in the Eagles Hall after the landing. There many a relative, who had not known the other existed, met for the first time, united in the common

Hundreds at Sea Fighting for Lives

LONDON (AP)—The worst storms in 30 years piled up a death toll, believed to be more than 30, in a long list of shipping disasters Sunday and spread floods and havoc over much of Britain.

Hundreds of seamen fought for their lives in crippled ships.

Seven men lay trapped in the wallowing wreck of the lightship South Goodwin. Shrieking winds ripped the lightship from its moorings and tossed it on the Goodwin sands, notorious graveyard for English Channel shipping.

An American air force helicopter crew snatched one man from the wreck in a daredevil rescue mission before rising tides closed over it last night. Ships stood by with oxygen torches ready to cut into the hulk today if the winds abate, but the weatherman forecast more gales.

Seven more seamen were feared dead aboard the fore section of the 20,125-ton Liberian tanker, World Concord, snapped in two by boiling seas off the Welsh coast. Earlier, 35 men had been rescued off the stern half after eight hours of peril.

Fears grew for 14 men aboard the 1,600-ton motorship, Rambler Rose, missing in the Lands End area where a ship was seen to sink Friday night.

Three seamen were believed killed in an explosion that ripped through the 9,829-ton Norwegian tanker Olov Ringdal in the Welsh port of Swansea. Fifteen were injured.

Wartime mines ripped free from rusty cables, bringing fresh hazards to the men trying to ride out the storm. Frantic SOS messages crackled out from the North Sea to the Atlantic.

Inland, rising floodwaters brought chaos to 18 counties in southwest England and the midlands. Anxious coast guards stood by the seawalls as the raging seas lashed higher at each tide.

Adrift 6,400 Miles

Wife's Faith Never Failed

This is the last in a series of articles by William Willis, 61-year-old New Yorker who sailed alone on a raft 6,400 miles across the Pacific from Peru to Pago Pago. Today: A wife's faith.

BY WILLIAM WILLIS

NEW YORK (NANA)—The docks of Pago Pago harbor were crowded as the boat that would take me to Apia, on British Samoa, approached. After having crawled 6,400 miles across the Pacific on a raft, covering only a few miles during many of the 115 days, I was now starting a much longer journey that would be ended when my plane landed in New York in less than a week.

The raft would stay in Samoa, so "present and future generations may see it" near where it landed at Pago Pago, as Richard Barrett Lowe, governor of the American Samoas, had been kind enough to write me formally.

I shook hands with the governor and his wife, unable to express my thanks for their kindness except to say, "I have found a home with you." My eyes were on the raft, still lying just where I had left her, as the boat, an inter-island vessel, pulled away. We arrived at Apia in the middle of the night, and I had to rush to make the plane that would take me on to Suva. There I caught a Clipper to Honolulu. After only four hours, it was on to San Francisco, and the same evening, to New York. I left Pago Pago October 20 and landed in New York on the morning of the 24th.

Impish ... Restless ... and 80 Churchill Still Unpredictable

BY JAMES F. KING

Age has dealt gently with The Old Man and if he has any immediate intention of retiring as prime minister has not confided it to his closest political associates. He enjoys keeping them guessing along with everyone else.

Lady Churchill, his doctor and a few intimate cronies have tried to slow him down where the passing years have failed.

They have a difficult patient. He shuffles when he walks—but then he always did; he slouches and growls a lot—but then he always has; he is stubborn—but he always was.

EDEN GETTING ON

This story going the rounds:

A group of Conservative friends hinted diplomatically to The Old Man that perhaps he should take it easier and give Foreign Secretary Eden his chance now to succeed him as prime minister.

Churchill listened patiently and then grumbled with a twinkle in his eyes:

"Maybe you are right. After all Anthony can't live forever."

Eden is 57.

Churchill looks like an old man and he is an old man, but he doggedly refuses to accept any allowances on this count. He can still hold his own in the daily skirmishing in the House of Commons.

Britain has had only two older prime ministers—both in the 19th century. Lord Palmerston died in office at 81; William Ewart Gladstone formed his last government at 82.

Mixed with Churchill's boundless energy is terrific recuperative powers—and a wonderful ability to relax.

Sir Winston likes comfort and style. Especially he prides himself as a connoisseur of good food and drink. Champagne is regular with meals; brandy afterwards.

Churchill has said: "I have been brought up and trained to have the utmost contempt for people who get drunk." His own drinking capacity is legendary—and he jokes about it himself sometimes.

Arsenic Cures Nerves

TULSA, Okla. (UP) — A "lonely hearts" widow last night calmly told police she put rat poison in her fourth husband's coffee because he "got on my nerves."

Their recent marriage climaxed a four-month "mail order" romance through a lonely hearts club.

Mrs. Nannie Doss, 49, said she put a spoonful of rat poison in her husband's coffee one afternoon, police said. An autopsy showed Doss' body had enough arsenic "to kill a horse."

Mrs. Doss, a smiling, friendly grandmother, had not been questioned here yet about the deaths of two other husbands.

Deserters Total 600

BY TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Deserters from Canada's armed services totaled 600 as of September 30.

Announcing this figure yesterday, national defense headquarters noted that the total is less than 1 per cent of Canada's enlisted strength of 113,000.

The search for deserters goes on without letup. Provincial and municipal police and the RCMP co-operate with the armed services in trying to track them down.

The Duke Was Flabbergasted

Royal Film Under Fire

LONDON (CP)—There will be changes in the selection of movies for the annual Royal film shows attended by the Queen. Most of Britain's film critics were outraged at this year's choice of MGM's "Beau Brummel," because it showed one royal ancestor going mad and another bursting into tears when refused permission to wed. The Daily Express quoted the Duke of Edinburgh as saying privately he was "flabbergasted" at this year's poor choice, although the Queen remarked after the showing that the film was beautiful. In one scene of "Beau Brummel," Robert Morley as George III engages in a lunatic hide-and-seek chase through the corridors of Windsor Castle—still a Royal home.

Talk of Freedom Useless Without Security, Home Says

BY BILL MAYOR

It is usless to talk of freedom without guaranteeing security, George Home, B.C. Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer, told a union institute yesterday.

In his keynote address to the third annual Victoria and District Union Institute, sponsored by CCL unions and local council, Home said:

Such talk is useless "unless we can make provisions for a proper housing program . . . an education program to give children of our country full freedom of opportunity, a full employment program . . . proper health insurance legislation, adequate old age pensions, family allowances to assist raising new citizens, proper mothers' allowances, and when necessary adequate unemployment insurance."

Home described as odd in the world struggle today that "one group has a theory that you can't achieve the welfare state without sacrificing political and spiritual freedom, while the other group expends the theory that human insecurity is the inevitable price that man must pay for freedom."

Home quoted from an address of Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, of Chicago, who asked a CIO convention:

"Are the common people to be granted their rightful participation in the political and social institutions which they have helped create . . . ?"

The bishop was quoted by Home as saying that "labor knows that organization is the most effective and most enduring way of achieving" these ends.

Twelve students, including two women, were in attendance at a public-speaking course one of four offered by the institute, yesterday afternoon.

They received instruction on public speaking by Grant McNeil, director of the public research bureau, as well as how to present motions and how to discuss matters from the floor.

Professor William Dixon, of the University of British Columbia, told another 12 students of social, taxation and labor legislation and sketched the history of the British North America Act.

The history of the union movement and union administration was given by Howard Conquergood, CCL education and welfare director. He told his class that the union movement must keep up with the times.

Joseph Morris, IWA district president, was course leader on the job of a shop. In discussion some students urged that new employees should be contacted immediately to become union members. Others urged distribution of union membership lists to keep workers informed of union activity.

The two-day institute concludes classes today with a banquet at 6 p.m. Guest speaker will be H. Landon Ladd, IWA director for eastern Canada.

Ballots will be sent out this week for the election of officers in Local 1-118, International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL), in Victoria.

S. Pernisie and Jack MacKenzie are nominated for the presidency. Earlier reports were that Pernisie was unopposed.

MacKenzie has been returned as local business agent.

Apprenticeship training has now been extended to include the watch-repairing trade. Indentured apprentices in the trade are now eligible for special school training.

A trade advisory committee has been set up from which a training syllabus has been prepared. The training period for this trade has been set at five years. In the light of past experience in other trades, provision exists to shorten the apprenticeship for previous experience or vocational training.

The International Labor Organization's Metal Trades Committee has reached agreement among its worker, employer and government members on a series of methods of labor-management co-operation in the world's metal-working plants.

Six delegates were present from Canada, including Dr. Paul Casselman, economics and research branch of the federal labor department; John Walton, industrial relations branch, federal labor department; G. P. Schollie, Canadian vice-president, International Association of Machinists; T. G. Beament, president of Fahralloy Canada Ltd., Orillia, Ont.; and A. B. Lawrason, of Bickle-Seagrave Ltd., Woodstock.

The committee found itself in favor of the following subjects suitable for consultation between management and labor. Information on the employment situation, accident prevention, plant welfare and social facilities, hygiene, vocational training, and employees' services.

Co-operation must not interfere with the normal functions of the organizations of employers or of the unions. Top management should be actively associated with the form of consultation and co-operation adopted.

A memorandum including these topics was adopted by the committee.

Enforcement of a 40-hour week throughout British Columbia will cut down unemployment and make more jobs, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers told the B.C. cabinet Friday.

Executive board of the union, which has 10,000 members in B.C., suggested the Hours of Work Act be amended to reduce the legal hours of work from 44 to 40 in an effort to hold down mounting joblessness.

Union also pressed for the elimination of overtime but pointed out the hours-reduction scheme would have to be the next step.

B.C. district executives asked the cabinet to urge the federal government to increase unemployment benefits to 65 per cent of earnings.

Union executives suggested a moratorium to protect unemployed who had incurred debts and could not continue payments.

Premier Bennett told the delegation that public works to ease the out-of-work problem would soon be initiated.

Harold (Whitey) Dahl, 45-year-old American pilot, was convicted in Geneva yesterday of stealing $30,000 worth of gold from a passenger plane he was piloting from Paris to Geneva in October, 1953. He was sentenced to two years in prison.

Woman Key Witness

CLEVELAND, O. (UP) — Prosecution attorneys said Saturday they expected to rest their case against accused wife-killer Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard next week by calling three witnesses to refute portions of Sheppard's explanation of what happened last July 4.

One of the witnesses, Miss Susan Hayes, is expected to climax the state case. She will be asked to tell her most intimate secrets in supporting the state's contention that Sheppard murdered his pregnant wife, Marilyn, because he had had affairs with the pert, 21-year-old laboratory technician.

Two other witnesses are aimed at knocking down other defense contentions. Dr. E. Richard Hexter examined the 30-year-old osteopath at Bay View Hospital the day of the murder. He found Sheppard suffered a black eye, but said he discovered no other indication of serious physical injuries.

Sheppard claimed he was attacked by a bushy-haired intruder as he ran to his wife's rescue the murder morning. Dr. Stephen Sheppard, an older brother, reported Dr. Sam suffered a broken neck in the attack. When pressed by authorities to produce X-rays showing the fracture, Dr. Steve said re-examination showed his brother had suffered a severe sprain, but not a break.

Thomas Weigle, a cousin of the murdered woman, will be asked to refute the defense claim that Dr. Sam was an even-tempered, loving husband and father who could not have committed the crime.

Canada's national research council developed from the council for scientific and industrial research set up in 1916.

U.S. Naval Blockade of Red China Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A naval blockade of Communist China was proposed Saturday by Senator William Knowland (R-Calif.) if the Reds reject a strong U.S. note demanding the release of 13 Americans they have imprisoned as spies.

Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, told a news conference the United States has a "moral obligation" to "use more than words to protect Americans abroad."

Making it clear he was speaking only for himself and without consultation with the defense and state departments, the California senator said he believes a blockade could be made effective without any grave risk of war.

He proposed that the United States approach this action through the United Nations. He said American allies ought to be willing to join in a blockade. But if they are not, he said, in no event should these allies be given any veto over American action.

"If the Communists don't respond to our note and continue to hold our uniformed men in prison in direct violation of the Korean truce, with or without the support of the United Nations we would be justified in clamping a tight blockade on China," Knowland asserted.

"We would serve notice on them that no vessel can get in or out of China until these Americans are released.

Two Sets of Twins Born in Seven Hours

Although they've been lifelong neighbors, the Onyszkiewiczs and the Poultons have never spoken to one another.

But in a few years time, long after they leave their cribs in the maternity ward of St. Joseph's Hospital, the foursome may be quite chatty.

The quartet set a record recently at the hospital. Seven hours after the Poulton twins entered the world, came the Onyszkiewicz girls — the first time two sets of twins have been born within such a short time at St. Joseph's.

Parents of a boy and girl are Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Poulton, 871 A Leslie, and the daughters belong to Mr. and Mrs. Michel Onyszkiewicz, 1222 Yukon.

Children and mothers were reported "doing well" last night.

TV NOTEBOOK

By Keith Dillabaugh

This business of telecasting programs which can be picked up by both conventional black-and-white and color receivers is apparently confusing to some people. The necessary scrambling and unscrambling of colors to effect this is quite a chore.

What happens is that the big color-TV cameras take three pictures, one for each of the three primary colors. These are mixed to provide a black-and-white picture signal and a separate sub-carrier of color signals as well. Regular receivers show the picture in ordinary monochrome by ignoring the color sub-carrier. On the other hand, the color receivers use the sub-carrier to convert the black-and-white signal back into the three primary-color pictures, which overlap on the screen and register on the eye as full natural color.

If this sounds involved, consider the fact that one tricolor tube in use boasts [illegible] of phosphor material on the tube's screen. These are arranged in triangular groups, each group containing a red, a blue and a green phosphor dot!

BY IAN MACDONALD

"Twould seem—according to "Merrie England"—that Sir Walter Raleigh had time for simple pleasures besides bowling on ye village green and scuttling the Armada.

It seems that this son of the "Sink the Spanish Seamen's Union" also pitched woo with a winsome wench named, of all things, Bessie Throckmorton, while being rushed by goode Queene Liz.

But for a while, between broadsides, the path of true love ran as smooth as six miles of Saskatchewan highway. Sir Walt and his friends, who also had their share of luckless love life, were as desolate as Liberace sans candelabra.

Sir Edward German's Elizabethan version of "Guys and Dolls" ends on a happy note, however, with most of the participants, perfectly paired, gambling on ye village green until the arrival of the Beefeaters' vice squad.

With a yo-ho-ho, and a double helping of Yorkshire pudding, Victoria Gilbert and Sullivan Society will give performances of "Merrie England" this Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Royal Theatre.

A cast of 30, plus 12 dancers and an orchestra of 13, will participate in the colorful singing and dancing operetta.

Flashing into the entertainment scene early in the New Year, Ice Cycles of 1955 promises to be one of the gayest and most spectacular productions ever presented at the local arena.

With a cast of more than 125, the 10th birthday edition has scenes based on the 75th anniversary of the invention of electric light to Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

Stars on flashing blades will be Jane Kirby and Mickey Carcompetitor, Margaret Field and copetitor, Margaret Field and Jimmy Lawrence.

The show will play Tuesday through Saturday, January 18 to 22, with a Saturday matinee.

"The Sea Shall Not Have Them" — there must be a shorter title, promises to be another first-rate British war story. The J. Arthur Rank movie will soon be premiered in London.

Langham Court Theatre has recently had snake trouble. On the off chance some well-meaning citizen might dump a boa-constrictor on their front doorstep, guilders made no appeal to the public for a reptile.

It is believed, however, that the problem will be solved by Saturday night, when "My Three Angels" begins its run at Langham Court Theatre.

A snake is very important in the play as it kills the villain and therefore allows the other characters to live happily ever after. Lead roles will be taken by Lou Lauk, Jorn Winther, Bruce Banyard, Jennifer Williams, Helen Smith and Ken Bostock.

Skinny Jerry Lewis Skinnier Than Ever

HOLLYWOOD - (NANA) — Although he never did cast much more than an invisible shadow, Jerry Lewis is at least 15 pounds thinner than ever — The result of a serious bout with a liver complication.

He hasn't lost his zest, his bounce or his urge for jocular conversation, though. Returning to Paramount for the new Martin-Lewis comedy, "You're Never Too Young," Jerry held an impromptu reception for friends, associates and the press.

He became immersed in idle conversation and continued to ignore director Norman Taurog's repeated protestations that time was afleetin' and that the front office might come in any moment and start a ruckus.

Jerry paid no heed. He kept on babbling. Finally, Taurog, himself a comic of long standing and a hefty one, came over with an equally powerful assistant, pounced on Jerry and carried him bodily away from his conference.

In spite of his protestations, they dumped him onto his dressing-room couch and proceeded to disrobe him. They then dressed Jerry in the gray jacket, blue shirt and red tie he was to wear in the first scene, picked him up again and carted him off to the set.

Jerry's only comment was: You guys irritate me—I don't know whether to hang around here or look for a job."

On the more serious side: Jerry's illness has cost the prolific movie, television, radio and night-club Martin-Lewis team an estimated $300,000 in gross income.

He was stricken on the eve of their opening three months ago at Ciro's and subsequently cancellations at Las Vegas, New York and several other cities, plus default on a heavy TV commitment, proved the worst financial wallop ever suffered by the twain.

HAS CONVINCED KERRY DRAKE, POLICE DETECTIVE, THAT THE DEATH OF LEFTY BALTO, HEAD OF A JUKE-BOX MONOPOLY, WAS NOT AN ACCIDENT!...
EXACTLY! THE KILLER JUMPED OUT BEFORE THE CAR WENT OVER THE CLIFF...
SKID MARKS END
THEN POURED GASOLINE OVER THE WRECK AND—

JULIET JONES JUDGE PARKER

THERE, NOW, MR. JONES. I THINK WE'RE READY FOR OUR LITTLE NAP. DO US WORLDS OF GOOD!
DID EVE GET OFF TO COLLEGE ALL RIGHT, MRS. MAYBANK?
WITHOUT A HITCH. AND JULIE'S AT HER PLAY-SCHOOL. NOW NO MORE TALKING UNTIL WE'RE FEELING REFRESHED. I'LL LOWER THE SHADES.
WELL, THAT'S MY ENTRANCE CUE!
AS THE WIDOWER JUDGE ALAN E. PARKER HANGS UP THE TELEPHONE, HIS SON, RANDY, QUESTIONS HIM IN THE PRESENCE OF JEEP CARSON, A LOVABLE PIXIE WHO LIVES NEARBY!
DID YOU KNOW THE LADY WHO CALLED, DAD?
NO, SON...BUT APPARENTLY SHE KNEW YOUR MOTHER QUITE WELL.
WHAT'S HER NAME?
MARLA DOREN! SHE'S JUST RETURNED TO TOWN AFTER SOME FIFTEEN YEARS ABROAD!
FIFTEEN YEARS?! GOSH, SHE MUST BE TERRIBLY, TERRIBLY OLD!

Daily Astrology - -

BY RITA DEL MAR

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 28

Today's quotation: "Live with men as if God saw you; converse with God as if men heard you." —Senaca.

Sunday for everyone: Be sociable, particularly during the evening. However, be careful to maintain poise in dealings with others; avoid hasty or impulsive moves or changes. Do not get involved in anything complicated. Rest, relax.

Look for your birthdate and birthsign below.

March 21 to April 19 (Aries)—Preserve your equilibrium if the atmosphere is somewhat electric now. Be tactful with higher-ups.

April 20 to May 20 (Taurus)—Make no important moves or revisions until you have acquired pertinent facts.

May 21 to June 20 (Gemini)—Be cautious; subject financial tie-ups and pledges to a detailed check to reveal possible oversights.

June 21 to July 22 (Cancer)—Maintain peace of mind. Keep calm, equipped to handle all eventualities.

July 23 to August 22 (Leo)—Gain insight on strong points, failings in your dietary, health picture. Act to remedy flaws, weaknesses.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Be wary of "changes which may have an impact on connections, congenital ties. Make adjustments.

September 23 to October 22 (Libra)—Direct attention to minor or household matters. Curb quarrelsome tendencies.

October 23 to November 21 (Scorpio)—If you are hesitant about ties, travel or general arrangements, pause a bit to reflect; secure opinions of others.

November 22 to December 21 (Sagittarius)—Take inventory of monetary standing and connections. Protect your interests re cash, reserves.

December 22 to January 19 (Capricorn)—Take cognizance of proposed revisions and points of discord with others. If necessary, make concessions.

January 20 to February 18 (Aquarius)—Acknowledge the necessity for greater selflessness in order to grapple successfully with difficulties.

February 19 to March 20 (Pisces)—Steer clear of current stress and strain; there may be some chaotic doings; don't be drawn into them.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 29.

Today's quotation: "Man is a piece of the universe made alive."—Emerson.

Monday for everyone: Recheck information and hearsay from time to time during day in order to see things objectively. Dispatch routine; use extra care in connections with matters involving friendship, love or money or credit transactions.

Look for your birthdate and birthsign below:

March 21 to April 19 (Aries)—Hold back your verbal or written O.K. if qualms assail you. Check credit items carefully.

April 20 to May 20 (Taurus)—Cultivate ease of manner and a spirit of compromise to offset any misunderstanding.

June 21 to July 22 (Cancer)—Prevail over misleading influences by thinking straight. Avoid a jarring note.

July 23 to August 22 (Leo)—Take nothing for granted; dispel doubts by investigation. Avoid unnecessary alterations.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Collect pertinent data about your current interests. Straighten out complications re finances, possessions.

September 23 to October 22 (Libra)—Be meticulous about home, office, family matters. Ward off befuddlement; don't let things slide.

October 23 to November 21 (Scorpio)—Iron out possible confusion concerning information, correspondence, petty items.

November 22 to December 21 (Sagittarius)—Go over monetary accounts; give them needed care or simplification. Shun a dogmatic stand.

December 22 to January 19 (Capricorn)—Don't kid yourself re friends, credit, your job. Delay consent until you're certain.

January 20 to February 18 (Aquarius)—Keep plans and contracts under control. Put the accent on objectivity, the long-range picture.

February 19 to March 20 (Pisces)—Examine information, accounts, concepts for possible flaws. Untangle involved situations.

Planning ahead—Good for entertainment, sociability, etc.: Daytime of December 3; December 4, 10, 11, 17.

There is that about this hand which is reminiscent of the practical joker who heated up half dollars and enjoyed his friends' discomfiture when they grabbed for them.

You can hardly quarrel with South's desire to get to game with his rock-crusher North had as little as might be expected, and yet South had an excellent play for the game. He probably would have made it, except that West was wary of hot half dollars.

After surrendering the first two diamond tricks, South trumped the third round. Next, he made a routine safety play. Since he didn't want to lost a trick to the adverse king of hearts after dummy's trumps were exhausted, he led the heart queen at once. Then, if the opponents won and led diamonds again, dummy would be able to ruff. West ducked the queen of hearts, so South now made a super-safety play. He continued with the jack of hearts. If West took that trick, South would still have been home free. But West ducked again, and the declarer was fixed.

He did the best he could by cashing the ace of hearts and the top spades, then leading the ace, king and jack of clubs. If West had held three clubs, all would have been well. But West was able to trump the third round of clubs and win the setting trick in spades after South had trumped the fourth diadiamond.

Moral: When the oppenent is anxious to press a trick upon you, it sometimes pays to wait until it has had a chance to cool off a little.

TV Talk

BY ROY PARRETT

After a year they are still trying to get the station to normal operating power.

My private spy in Vancouver tells me that they tried to boost the output a few days ago, with unfortunate results.

Better news from CBUT is the advent of Howdy Doody on Channel 2 starting Monday.

The popular children's puppet show will be seen every week day at 5:30 p.m.

Howdy Doody will take on a distinctive Canadian atmosphere on the CBC-TV series. A new script of special interest to young Canadians has been prepared for the show.

"Macbeth," a two-hour presentation co-starring Maurice Evans and Judith Anderson, is the big television news today. The Shakespeare play will be seen on KOMO-TV's Hall of Fame at 4 this afternoon.

Alexander Korda's classic "Anna Karenina," starring Vivian Leigh and Sir Ralph Richardson, is the KTVW-TV feature at 7:30.

Ezio Pinza and the entire company of "Fanny" appear on Toast of the Town on KTNT-TV at 8. Teresa Brewer, Collier's All American Football Team of 1954, and Jay Marshall, comedian, appear too.

Elizabeth Taylor, Van Johnson, Julius La Rosa, the 65 member University of Pennsylvania Mask and Wig Club, the Harlem Globe Trotters and lyric soprano Rosanna Carteri are the attractions on CBUT's Ed Sullivan Show on Channel 2 at 8.

Vancouver has just received a number of the Solomon collection of modern art which is currently being exhibited at the Vancouver Art Gallery tonight at 10.

CBUT movie crews will visit the famous collection and look over the exhibits, including the paintings by world-famous artists such as Klee, Picasso, Seurat, and others.

LA To Buy Drapes For Clinic

The Women's Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital met recently with Mrs. C. C. Annett in the chair. Members decided to purchase drapes for treatment rooms and doctor's office at the Cancer Clinic and also to provide drapes for two small wards in the hospital.

Mrs. H. B. Nash and her buying committee will purchase Christmas treats provided by the Auxiliary for the staff. Mrs. W. G. Thorpe who will be in charge of decorating Christmas trees at the hospital asked any one wishing to help to contact her at E 1820. Mrs. Thorpe will also purchase gifts and spoons for new born infants in hospital at Christmas.

It was reported that 83 articles had been finished at the November sewing meetings and that the next meetings would be held on December 1 and 8 in the hospital annex.

Mrs. R. Bell, Mrs. Perritt, Mrs. A. V. Price, Mrs. H. McIntyre, Miss M. Curry and Mrs. F. Boughton are the committee appointed to look after arrangements for the bridge tea to be held on February 15.

Mincemeat Prepared for Bazaar

Choice Goods and Tea At St. Andrew's Bazaar

BY DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

The cosy hand-knitted woollen garments, the home cooking and tea were all up to the usual high standard at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Women's Guild bazaar held yesterday in the church parlor. I can vouch for the tea because I had mine in the serving room surrounded by boxes of delicious sandwiches and a wonderful spread of all kinds of cakes. Like the Scottish women's solid upstairs they were the real thing.

One of the cakes, a dream cake, had such a delicious icing that I found out how to make it. If you're interested in surprising the family with something really good, here it is. Six tablespoons of icing sugar, three tablespoons butter, two tablespoons milk and two tablespoons of boiling water, and it must be boiling. Beat until thick and spread on your favorite cake.

There was a brisk business done at the many stalls many persons taking advantage of the lovely articles for sale to stock up on Christmas gifts.

Mrs. William Davidson was general convener of the affair which was opened by Mrs. Edgar Foreman and Mrs. C. W. Pauline looked after the tea. Mrs. R. Morrison received the guests and Mrs. C. C. Warren was tea hostess. Mrs. R. L. Fairbairn, Mrs. D. McPherson and Mrs. F. Osborn poured tea and assisting in serving were Mrs. John L. Clay, Mrs. Hunter Gordon, Mrs. W. Holder, Mrs. J. W. King, Mrs. W. B. Colvin, Mrs. W. Colvin, Mrs. O. Johnson, Mrs. J. Miller and Miss Anne Draper.

Helping with the tea were Mrs. F. Greenway, Mrs. A. Gornall, Mrs. T. Taylor, Mrs. David Scott, Mrs. R. Armstrong and Mrs. George Hay.

Mrs. F. A. Lindsay was in charge of door receipts and was also convener of the mixed lemons stall at which Mrs. H. Warren and Mrs. S. F. Marling assisted.

Those looking after the various stalls were Mrs. A. Hood, Mrs. G. Burnett and Miss Alice Jackson, baby wear; Mrs. W. R. Gunn, books; Mrs. A. Crofts, Mrs. W. Draper, Mrs. W. H. Lloyd, Mrs. G. Bowles, Mrs. A. Houston, Mrs. A. L. Stevenson, Mrs. Ivan Wilson and Mrs. M. Hurst, home cooking; Mrs. J. W. Cameron, Mrs. H. Lloyd, Mrs. H. S. Mason, Mrs. D. A. MacDonald, Mrs. T. F. Robertson and Mrs. R. Cox, fancy work; Mrs. C. Chapman, Mrs. F. Middleton, Mrs. J. McKay and Mrs. R. Ross, aprons; Mrs. L. W. Johnson, Mrs. Gordon Moore and the Misses Lily Wilson, Joan Lawrence, Joan Lewis and Anne Stuart, accessories; Mrs. Ken Leeming, Mrs. J. C. Smith and Mrs. J. F. Boyd, candy; Mrs. B. Tisdall, Mrs. A. Mehaffy and Mrs. S. Watts, white elephant; Miss Penny Tisdall, jewelry; Miss Gladys Irving, Mrs. George Tyson, Mrs. Andrew Milligan and Miss Mary Campbell, handkerchiefs; Misses Anne Draper, Nancy Dean and Linda Gehan, Christmas cards; Mr. H. Lord and Mr. W. Hogg, plants, fruit and vegetables.

Painted Pottery Plates as Gifts

Rushing into town to buy those Christmas gifts is going to occupy a great deal of time within the next few weeks. For a colorful, useful, inexpensive gift there are some really good looking pottery plates and bowls from Italy, priced at $1.25 and $2 respectively. The salad servers, also pottery with brown handles and white ends are 75 cents the pair. The plates and bowls are a good size and painted in wonderful colors. In this same line there are small dressing bowls at $2 for one with pottery spoon.

The Proof

These are really worthwhile gifts, I think. In fact I liked them so well that I bought one on the spot, complete with servers. On the way home that night I dropped in to see a friend and she became so enthusiastic that I gave it to her and promptly went back to the store again the next day and got another for myself. That should be proof.

Leaf Shapes

Also from Italy were some lovely plates and cocktail servers (for want of a better name) all in leaf shape with leaves painted on the white pottery. One large, elongated leaf partitioned into smaller leaves was priced at $16.50. Another broad leaf plate had a dip bowl in the centre and three extra dishes that fit into the leaf, sells for $6.50.

A white cigaret box with a black "cat and the fiddle" painted on the top opened to reveal two oblong ash trays, the set costing $2.75.

In the same store I noticed some nice gift pottery coffee jugs in yellow and tan sitting atop a candle warmer of cast iron. These were selling for $6.50. The same idea were little miniature saucepans over small candle warmers which have a dual purpose of keeping melted butter melted at the table or for warming baby's food.

For Silver

A particularly nice candle warmer had a top of white tile with enclosed box sides of open work which can be used to keep a teapot or even a silver dish of food warm without doing harm. The price was $6.95.

While writing about the leaf pattern pottery I forgot to mention the small leaves which would be grand for almost anything at the bridge table and for that incidental present. Only 85 cents.

Wedding December 23

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur George Voyer, 1264 McKenzie Street, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Beverley Patricia, to Mr. Delford Dennis Barton, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. D. Barton, Listowel, Ontario. The wedding will take place December 23 at 7.30 p.m., in Fairfield United Church, Rev. Thomas Haythorne officiating. The bride-to-be has chosen Miss Betty Beattie as maid of honor, and her sister, Ellen, as junior bridesmaid. Mr. Jack Heath will be best man, and ushers will be Mr. Kent Petursson and Mr. Lloyd Mitchell.

Beauty and You

By MARION MATTHEWS

To be feminine and lovely is to be accented by your favorite perfume. With the holiday season at hand this important accent to your grooming should receive some careful thought.

Do you own a perfume you consider the most enjoyable for your wearing? Do you remember to use it often? When you can't answer the affirmative to both, you should take time out for some thoughtful shopping at the perfume counter. Only when you try a fragrance on your own skin, can you be certain it is to your own liking. Next time you shop, give yourself a few minutes to talk with the girl back of the counter who should be familiar with her perfume stock and the likes and dislikes of many women. Perhaps she can help you make a more direct approach to what you want, too. For example, if you enjoy floral scents, you might start off with that variety and try two or three—from the sweet and simple to the exotic floral types.

Again, you may be the type much happier when sniffing a spicy, or woodsy scent. Try those you feel you would know best and therefore enjoy but don't close your mind to something new. New and important fragrances appear from time to time and women who know perfumes eagerly await their arrival for they may find something they'll enjoy adding to a collection of favorites.

Take the time this holiday season to use your perfumes. They can help you feel more important and really up to that busy schedule.

Victoria High School To Present "The Robe"

Cast of 27 . . .

Victoria High School drama students will present an adaptation of Lloyd C. Douglas' novel "The Robe" as their Christmas play this year.

The play, under the direction of Mr. Thomas Mayne, will be presented in Victoria High School auditorium at 8.15 p.m. this Friday and Saturday, December 3 and 4.

A cast of 27 will appear on stage, and nearly 40 other students are on backstage committees. An innovation this year is the fact that students are handling all the backstage work—lighting, scene changing and props—without assistance of staff members.

Wedding at Sidney of Wide Interest

A wedding of wide interest was solemnized yesterday afternoon at St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Sidney, when Lannea Ann Newton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Newton, Experimental Station, Saanichton, V.I., became the bride of Peter Donald Lowes, son of Col. and Mrs. J. H. Lowes, Yateley, North Camberley, Surrey, England.

Calla lilies banked the altar, before which Rev. Roy Melville read the marriage service, and baskets of white and autumn-toned chrysanthemums decorated the church. Mr. Eric V. Edwards played organ music, and Mr. E. Hammond was bell-ringer.

The charming bride chose a gown of fine French imported lace in a rich ivory tone, falling in graceful princess lines to a chapel train. The neckline was pointed and the sleeves were long. A headdress of lace touched with pearls and iridescent sequins held her fingertip veil of illusion net, and her bouquet was formed of cream roses.

Glowing autumn tones were reflected in the attendants' gowns. Miss Joan Newton, as maid of honor for her sister, was gowned in copper-colored taffeta, ballerina-length with tiny matching hat and shoes, while bridesmaid Miss Phyllis Cooper chose gold-colored taffeta. Both carried chrysanthemums in gold and bronze shades with brown velvet ribbons.

Miss Caroline Andrews was flower girl, frocked in ivory taffeta and carrying a basket of dainty gold chrysanthemums.

Best man was Mr. David Cooper, and ushers were Mr. John Newton, brother of the bride, and Mr. Robert Harlow.

The reception was held at the Swartz Bay home of the bride's parents, where Mr. W. H. Robertson of Victoria proposed the bridal toast. A silver vase of cream rosebuds topped the three-tier wedding cake, which was flanked by tall candles in silver holders.

Following their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Lowes will go to Vancouver to make their home.

Arrange Tartan Ball on December 3

St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society tartan ball will be held in the south ballroom of the Crystal Garden on Friday evening, December 3. The grand march at the colorful affair will take place at 9 o'clock. Pictured above are members of the committee and their wives, from left to right, standing: Mr. Stewart Simpson, Mr. Campbell Thomson, Mr. Alex Stephens, Mrs. Stephens, and Mr. John Robinson. Seated, Mrs. Thomson, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Simpson and Mrs. J. Stewart.

Parents Come From Scotland For Daughter's Wedding Here

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson came from Troon, Scotland, for their daughter Margaret's wedding which took place yesterday afternoon in St. John's Anglican Church. Rev. Canon George Biddle officiated at the double-ring ceremony uniting in marriage Margaret Lindsay Wilson and Douglas Gundry Alexander, Alexander 2945 Admirals Road.

White and mauve chrysanthemums decorated the church and Mr. Frederick Chubb played the traditional organ music. During the signing of the register Mr. John Bray sang "O Perfect Love."

Miss Betty McIndoe was the only attendant. She chose a frock of turquoise taffeta and carried a bouquet of two-toned bronze chrysanthemums with matching headdress.

Mr. Ralph Alexander was best man for his brother and Mr. Rod Justice and Mr. John Mat- showed the guests to the pews.

Mr. Jim Lindsay proposed the toast to the bride at the reception held at the Olde England Inn.

Wedding in Montreal

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Rogers, 630 Island Road, Oak Bay, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Maureen Elisabeth, to Mr. Ralph N. Norris, only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Norris of Sydney, N.S. The wedding will take place December 18, in St. Kevin's Church, Montreal. Miss Rogers, at present with the Victorian Order of Nurses, Montreal, graduated from the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Vancouver, later attending Victoria College, and graduated from St. Joseph's School of Nursing in 1952. Mr. Norris, a graduate of Acadia University, Wolfville, N.S., also attended Nova Scotia Technical College, Halifax, and the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. He is now with the Experimental Engineering Department of Canadair, Montreal. The couple will make their home in Montreal.—(Photos by Posen.)

Mid-December Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. O. Pellerin, Ladysmith, B.C., wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Pauline Ida-Marie, to Mr. Roland Lloyd Prince, youngest son of Capt. and Mrs. A. Prince, Victoria. The marriage will take place on December 11 at 7.30 p.m. in St. Mary's Church, Ladysmith. Miss Pellerin, RN, is a '53 graduate from St. Joseph's School of Nursing. Her attendants will be Miss Ivy Hadley, RN, bridesmaid; Mrs. E. MacDonald, RN, matron of honor, and Miss Adele Pellerin, her sister, flower girl. Mr. Don Giles will be best man. —(Photo by Goertz.)

Wedding in RCAF Chapel Unites Victoria Couple

White carnations were placed on the altar of the RCAF Chapel, Winnipeg, Man., for the wedding of Lorine Esther Whittle, daughter of Mrs. A. McKenzie, Victoria, and Flying Officer Christopher D'Albini Young, son of Mrs. H. D. Young, Victoria.

Padre H. Cox officiated. Mrs. P. Aumonier sang "Wedding Prayer" and "O Perfect Love", accompanied by Mrs. P. Skumka at the organ.

Given in marriage by FO Leslie Skumka, the bride looked lovely in an ankle-length gown of white nylon net over taffeta, topped by a silvery white bolero jacket with lily-point sleeves. A pearl studded tiara held her fingertip veil in place and she carried a cascade bouquet of American Beauty roses and lily of the valley.

Mrs. Joan Coupland of Victoria was the matron of honor for her sister, wearing a gown of pale yellow nylon net over taffeta. Her colonial bouquet was of mauve chrysanthemums and yellow rosebuds. Brides maid Miss Clara Clark was dressed in pale green nylon net and lace with colonial bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums and pink rosebuds.

Best man was FO Douglas Graham and ushers were Flt Lieut V. Wuorinen and FO Ronald Tomlinson.

A reception was held in the Jamaica Room of the Officers' Mess where a three-tier wedding cake was cut and a buffet luncheon served. FO Peter Regan proposed the bridal toast.

For a short motor trip east, the bride wore a light grey dress with matching jacket, charcoal grey princess-style coat and light blue and black accessories. The couple will live in Winnipeg.

Home from Mainland

Mrs. George Tudge, Wagar Road, Langford, and Mrs. D. Gillingham, Avonlea Auto Court, who have recently been in Vancouver where they visited Mrs. Tom Wyley and Miss Jean Dillmore, have returned to their homes.

Cameron-Neirinck Marriage Solemnized at St. Andrew's

A gold and silver locket which her great-grandmother, grandmother and mother had worn on their wedding days and the groom's gift of gold earrings were the jewelry worn by lovely bride Teresa V. Neirinck at her wedding yesterday morning to John Hugh Cameron.

White and yellow chrysanthemums decorated St. Andrew's Cathedral for the ceremony performed by Rev. Father M. MacDonald, uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Neirinck, 746 Filing Street, and the son of Mrs. Jean Simpson, 828 Courtney Street, and the late Mr. Hugh Cameron.

Miss Marguerite McKay played organ music and Miss Marjorie McKay sang "Panis Angelicus" and "Ave Maria". Guest pews were marked with rosettes of white satin ribbon.

Imported brocaded silk fashioned the bride's regal wedding gown, which was styled with long sleeves and full skirt cascading into a long cathedral train strewn with sprays of orange blossoms. Her candle-light illusion veil fell to chapel length from a jewelled coronet, and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white roses and carnations.

Mrs. Jack Papick, matron of honor for her sister, was gowned in mauve net, the strapless bodice topped with a lace bolero. Bridesmaid Mrs. Tom Rixon and bridesmaid Miss Helen Walsh, both of Port Angeles, were taffeta and net gowns with matching capes in turquoise blue and yellow respectively.

The little flower girl, Miss Marian Strom, cousin of the bride, was gowned in pink. The attendants wore caps to match their gowns and carried colonial bouquets of small chrysanthemums.

Mr. James Greer of Sardis, B.C., was best man, and ushers were Mr. Joseph Neirinck and Mr. Jack Papick. The bride's nephew, Norman Papick, carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

IN EVENING

A reception was held in the evening at Norway House when guests were welcomed by the bride's mother, who wore a black and white dress with matching accessories and corsage of pink roses and the groom's mother, wearing a dusty rose suit, black velvet accessories and corsage of yellow roses.

The three-tier wedding cake was topped with a miniature bridal couple and centred a lace-covered table. Mr. Donald K. Smyth proposed the toast.

After a honeymoon motoring up-Island, Mr. and Mrs. Cameron will live in the Lincoln Apartments, Port Angeles.

For traveling, the bride wore a charcoal grey tailored suit with black and winter white accessories and corsage of pink roses.

Tickled Trio Still Rooting

Three of the happiest Edmontonians (now Victorians) in the city yesterday after the Edmonton Eskimos' Grey Cup victory were Gordie Williamson, former dean of western sports broadcasters; his wife, Isobel, and his dog, Mike King, named after and given to Gordie by the Eskimo fullback, "who also has that scrappy, chesty look," Gordie says.

What a Day To Work

It's Wonderful! Just Ask Isobel

Most Edmontonians in Victoria were somewhat delirious with joy yesterday after the Edmonton Eskimos won the Grey Cup, but two of the happiest were Mr. and Mrs. Gordie Williamson.

"Isobel can't speak yet," Gordie said about his wife four hours after the game.

Isobel could speak, but the first words she said were, "Isn't it wonderful!"

Gordie, for the last two years in proprietor of an Oak Bay grocery store, was dean of Western Canadian sportscasters before he came here from Edmonton, the first to broadcast football in the West and the first to broadcast major hockey games.

Mrs. Williamson, her husband says, has another sort of claim to fame.

TALKED WAY IN

"Isobel's the only person ever to talk her way into a Grey Cup game," he asserted.

"Two years ago, I was doing the pre-game parade broadcast. I had the tickets, and when the game was about to start and I hadn't shown up, Isobel crashed the gate. She just talked her way in.

"Gosh, I was mad. I missed the whole first quarter waiting for her outside.

"Finally I said to a kid 'Want to see the game, son?'

"He did, and when we got to the seats there was Isobel."

ONE OF BEST

Williamson, who broadcast the Grey Cup game three years ago, said yesterday's game was one of the best in recent years.

"This is one day," he said, "I wish I didn't have to work."

Wicks, Unions Set Meeting

A conference on the unemployment situation will be held December 6 at Vancouver by Labor Minister Lyle Wicks and three province-wide trade union groups.

Invited by the minister to attend the conference are officers of the Trades Union Congress (TLC), the B.C. Federation of Labor (CCL), and the railways' joint legislative committee.

Possible means of dealing with and heading off unemployment will be discussed.

SECOND CONFERENCE

The conference is the second called by the minister. Mr. Wicks met recently with representatives of several large construction firms, urging where possible elimination of overtime and hiring of more employees.

The Victoria unemployment picture, which the National Employment Service reports worsened last week apparently has not reached a stage similar to Vancouver.

Victoria labor councils, which have unemployment committees appointed, have not taken any direct action on the situation.

Victoria District Trades and Labor Council (AFL-TLC) expects its first committee meeting about December 1.

PREPARING BRIEF

At Vancouver, hit by an influx of unemployed workers and lay offs, the CCL and TLC labor councils are preparing a joint brief for submission to the municipal provincial and federal governments. They also have met Community Chest officials.

No similar steps have been reported in Victoria.

Death Brings Renewed Fight To Remove Underpass, Bridge

Angry residents of View Royal promised last night to renew their fight for elimination of a narrow underpass and slippery bridge on Helmcken Road after a skid on the bridge caused a two-car collision and killed an elderly pedestrian yesterday.

George William Halliday, 82, of 784 Hillside, a retired Prairie farmer who came here in 1947, died instantly after the impact of the car tossed him 65 feet into a shallow ditch.

The accident occurred less than a month after View Royal residents made a strong protest against the dangerous zone, which is only a stone's throw from the View Royal Elementary School.

PROTEST PLANNED

The View Royal Community Association and the PTA said they would protest to the public works department.

Mrs. John Pennington, PTA president, said, "It had to happen . . . every parent in View Royal would say 'I told you so.'"

However, Cpl. Joseph Shepherd of the RCMP Colwood detachment said that the underpass did not contribute to the accident despite the fact that "it is a dangerous section."

Mr. Halliday was following his daily habit of visiting his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Price, 193 Helmcken Road.

He was half a block from the home and was walking north on the left side of the highway having gone under the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway underpass and across the bridge.

A car driven by Kenneth Joseph Finch, 3912B Helen Road, slowed down at the north end of the bridge to make a left turn onto Gull Road. It was hit from behind by a car driven by William Walker Williamson, of Nanaimo, who tried to stop his car but found that it skidded on the planking of the bridge.

Mr. Halliday was born in Dumbarton, Scotland, and came to Canada in 1912. He farmed at Meota, Saskatchewan, until his retirement to Victoria seven years ago.

WALKING OVER

"He came by bus and was walking over," Mr. Price said. "He always walked to one side of the road.

"Many times I have nearly been sideswiped while walking on the bridge at night," he added.

Repeated efforts have been made to have the underpass and bridge eliminated since the elementary school was opened in 1949.

The PTA decided at its October meeting to make an all-out effort for removal of the two structures, the major part of its 1954-55 program and arranged a panel discussion for November 3.

Parents asked J. H. Harding, traffic engineer of the public works department in Langford to have a white line painted on one side of Helmcken to act as a sidewalk.

He replied that the step would be impossible because a department machine had been laid up for the winter.

UNDERPASS PAINTED

However, the underpass was painted with luminous paint for night drivers and a sign "Narrow Underpass. Watch for Children" was erected after the meeting.

Alex Gardiner, a PTA member, said a petition was circulated in 1949 in demands for a footpath along the bridge. Only steps taken were signs and patrols.

"It is impossible to stop on the bridge at present as the surface is saturated with oil and water," he stated.

Helmcken runs at a 35-degree offangle from the underpass which is 19 feet wide in depth but only 11 feet wide on the angle.

W. M. Moore, president of the community association, said a proposal was made four years ago for a wider underpass, to cost $30,000.

PLAN REJECTED

Cost would have been divided evenly by the railway and the provincial government, but the government refused to pay its share.

A few hours after the accident, James Stenhouse Gibson, 1562 Clawthorpe, escaped injury when his car smashed into a parked car on Helmcken, a short distance north of the bridge.

Police said damage to Gibson's car was $900 and to the other car was $600. Charges will be laid, they said.

Mr. Halliday's death was the first traffic death in the Colwood-View Royal area since the Suicide Corner crash November 10, 1953, which killed three Victoria men.

Inquest will be held at 2 p.m. tomorrow in Sands Funeral Home.

Funeral services will be held at Sands at 3 p.m. Tuesday with Canon Robert Willis and Canon A. E. Greenhalgh officiating, and will be followed by burial at Royal Oak.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Price and Mrs. Gordon Edgelow, Meota, Saskatchewan, 12 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Election Rallies Planned

The civic affairs group of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a public forum for all civic election candidates at the Britannia auditorium December 6 at 8 p.m.

All eight aldermanic candidates have signified they will attend and a speaker will outline the money by-laws.

Jaycees have already launched a "Get Out and Vote Campaign."

As part of the campaign business firms have been asked by letter to insert a line in newspaper advertisements which will remind the readers that December 9 is polling day in the City of Victoria.

The first public meeting in connection with the election will be held Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Sponsored by the Civic Interest Group of the Business and Professional Women's Club this meeting will be held in the club room, 902 Government Street.

Speakers will be the four women who have already announced their candidacy.

Miss Jane Hall, former officer and regional director of the women's club, is making her initial appearance in the aldermanic field as is Mrs. W. H. Wilson, daughter of Ald. Margaret Christie.

Mrs. W. W. McGill is seeking reelection to the Greater Victoria School Board together with Mrs. D. P. W. Mamsell.

Bank Here Soon

A branch of an eighth bank will open in Victoria early in the new year, The Daily Colonist learned last night.

Barclays Bank (Canada) will open a branch at 747 Fort, just east of Douglas, since 1911 the location of the Wickham Cameron Co. Ltd. shoe store which will move to new premises.

Eric Hall, who recently arrived in Victoria to arrange construction of the branch, is expected to be the first manager.

DRAWING PLANS

Wade Stockdill and Armour, architects, are drawing plans for the branch.

Barclays Bank is one of England's "big five" and the only British bank with a Canadian charter. It has had a branch in Vancouver for a number of years.

The other seven banks represented in Victoria are the Banks of Montreal, Toronto and Nova Scotia, Canadian Bank of Commerce, Dominion Bank, Imperial Bank of Canada and Royal Bank of Canada.

Two Hurt In Crash

Two passengers were taken to hospital, and a telephone pole was snapped by a car at Linkleas and McNeill about 8 p.m. last night.

Miss Joan Houghton, 2957 Foul Bay Road, was discharged from Royal Jubilee Hospital after treatment for minor injuries. George A. Kinloch, Royal Roads, was taken to HMCS Naden Hospital suffering head lacerations.

Oak Bay police identified the driver as George A. Veiner, Royal Roads.

City Alpinists Re-elect Lash

A. W. Lash was re-elected chairman of the Victoria section of the Alpine Club of Canada last night at the annual meeting.

Other officers are Miss Margery Thomas, secretary, and Miss Connie Bonner, P. Gilbraide, Cyril Jones, Noel Lask and Mabel Duggan.

Latest Addition Aids Eye Surgery

Recent opening of a 14-bed eye surgery wing puts St. Joseph's Hospital on a par with the best in the country in this field.

The wing will afford the best possible service and training for nurses, says medical superintendent Dr. A. J. Brunet.

A 57-year-old Victoria man remained in St. Joseph's Hospital last night after he and another motorist were thrown from their cars following a collision at Richardson and Mosa yesterday.

Nick Buzunas, 851 Pandora, suffered minor head injuries and was in good condition in hospital.

James Edwin Denman, 1083 Carberry Gardens, the other driver, and Don Stroud, 1269 Pembroke, his passenger, were sent home after treatment for cuts and bruises.

Damage to buildings was negligible but traffic was held up while firemen extinguished chimney fires at 134 Moss Street and the intersection of Cormorant and Government yesterday afternoon.

City police were searching for two Vancouver men yesterday after receiving a complaint that attempts were being made to sell a magazine allegedly authorized by the Victoria Police Department.

A citizen said a man was soliciting for "Pagaron Magazine," which was supposed to be a police-approved traffic safety publication.

The man left a telephone number, which was found to be that of an apartment hotel room occupied by two men from Vancouver.

Vernon Groves Dies

Vernon Joseph "Vern" Groves, 36-year-old production manager of radio station CJVI, died of a heart attack in his home at 2411 Inez Drive, Friday afternoon.

Mr. Groves became ill at work during the morning and went home. A doctor and a fire department inhalator crew were called at the time of the seizure.

A native of Sydney, Australia, Mr. Groves had lived in Victoria since 1928. After receiving his education in local schools, he joined the staff of CJVI in 1941, rising to the position of chief announcer until he went to CKWX, Vancouver, in 1947.

RETURNED TO CJVI

He became production manager at CKWX in 1950 and returned to CJVI two years later.

During the past two years, he was one of those instrumental in designing the new CJVI studios and produced many programs, including "Enterprise in Action."

Survivors include his wife, Dorothy, and two sons, Gordon and Norman, all at home; his mother, Mrs. May Evelyn Groves, Victoria; one brother, Lieut. Roderick E. Groves, RCN, Toronto; and an aunt, Mrs. Eli Hampton, 1467 Bay.

Funeral arrangements are in the hands of McCalls' Funeral Home and will be announced tomorrow.

Loss of $6 in a long white envelope marked J. B. Gamble was reported to city police yesterday by Patricia Gamble, 36 Tovey Crescent.

She said the envelope was lost on Government near Belleville.

Clipper Was Right Nobody Was Clipped

The man with the clippers was right and the woman who claimed she was clipped was wrong when police were called to mediate a dispute in a Victoria barber shop yesterday.

The woman said the barber overcharged for her young son's haircut, but police reported that they "found signs properly displayed in this shop re children's haircuts on Saturday."

Voters To Hear Views

Candidates To Sponsor Meeting in Esquimalt

Esquimalt voters will hear the views of candidates for municipal offices at a new type of meeting December 9.

Three of the candidates announced yesterday that they will sponsor the meeting and all other candidates are welcome.

In the past the annual meeting was staged by the municipal council or the ratepayers' association; this year, it will be sponsored by James Bryant, J. E. Carey and G. K. Sammon, the councillors who are seeking re-election.

Meeting will be held at 8 p.m., December 9, in the Boilermakers' Hall, Esquimalt Road.

Mr. Bryant, who will be chairman said the three councillors want to "give an account of their stewardship" to the taxpayers, and added that Reeve A. C. Wurtele will be guest speaker.

He said that "anyone aspiring to office in Esquimalt will be given an opportunity to speak."

Other candidates are Ralph Meakes for council, Clr. George Argyle and Frank Mitchell for police commission, and R. H. Reeve for school board.

Home in Victoria Air Victim's Wish

A war-veteran flier who was [illegible] coming to Victoria to live was one of two RCAF officers who died Friday night in a Saskatchewan plane crash.

He was FO B. F. Whitsun, a native of Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., whose wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Carstairs, live at 1248 May Street here.

He and FO. John N. Hultman of Vancouver were killed when their Harvard trainer crashed on a flight from Claresholm, Alta., to Portage la Prairie.

Mrs. Carstairs said last night that FO Whitsun had been one of the first Canadians to fly overseas during the Second World War. He was a prisoner of war for 4½ years in Germany, worked in Vancouver for a time after the war, and then rejoined the air force.

"He wanted to come here to live when he retired," Mrs. Carstairs said. "He said the Uplands was the place for him."

Happy-Hearted New Story To Brighten Yule Season

Perfect for children and appealing to adults, this is a complete, original story, and we'll bet you've never read or seen anything as joyous as Heavenly Daze.

Starting today and reaching its climax in the Christmas Day paper, the story will set the scene for the holiday for the children.

They'll meet Heavenly, the little angel-hero; Fielding the Fiend; Julie the little girl, and Griddlebone, an angelic dachshund.

Ben Martin's whimsical wonder comic strip, has the wisdom and warmth of Christmas in a modern picture fable.

All of the characters in Heavenly Daze vie for the Christmas Star, which is stolen by Fielding the Fiend. You'll see this rascal discover the panga and blessings of love. You'll see a flying [illegible] and a worried, [illegible] Claus, simply, clearly and imaginatively drawn by the artist.

Mr. Martin worked for months to create this fine story, which comes as an exclusive in this area to readers of this newspaper.

A new column started on the sports pages last week when "Behind the Glass" made its appearance. Written by sports editor Jim Tang, himself an ardent [illegible], the column is a bow to the increasing popularity here of the game of curling. The column is slated to appear regularly, probably on Tuesday mornings, to recount news of the roaring game.

"Behind the Glass" is the second column addition to the sports pages recently. Already popular after five weeks is Harry Young's "At the 19th" golf column, to be found in the Colonist every Wednesday morning.

You'll probably never see the initials "P.M.F." in a Colonist headline, but if you do it's okay by the owner of the name. He's Pierre Mendes-France, French premier, who realizes that his name is a handicap to headline writers. If his name has to be reduced, he says, he would prefer the initials to Mendes. J. E. Jones continues the writings of economists today on Page 3, with a report on the Nash Metropolitan.

Most embarrassed newspaper man in Victoria last week was Peter Bruton, who was roused out of bed at 2:30 a.m. by a policeman. All a case of mistaken identity, but the reporter wondered for a while what he could have done. Many of the staff saw the Grey Cup on television and thrilled to the 26-25 Edmonton win. Even the friendly bets were forgotten in the thrilling finish. Sports writers generally missed a great chance to become famous by flatly calling the Eskimos to win.

Seen in Passing

Jack Law, too busy escorting a fair companion to heed a neighbor's greetings . . . Marian Troutman a trifle self-conscious about her new Italian cut but prettier than ever . . . Rajinder Sardar giving out with her bright, cheery smile . . . Bob Thomson held up by highway block at Goldstream while rushing to appear at Nanaimo as a descendant of pioneers . . . Dorothy, Victor and Arthur Sage taking part in a gathering of the Sage clan . . . Tom Menzies of Courtenay feeling lonely while his wife was being feted . . . Rev. Gillespie entertaining at Naden Wardroom in honor of Captain William Strange . . . Bob Montgomery extolling the virtues of a used car . . . Mac Eggleston excitedly discussing the Grey Cup game . . . George Gregory with a nice-looking camera.

The Island Carrier as she was in days gone by, when she roamed the Seven Seas as a refrigerating sailing vessel under four different names between 1892 and 1930. This picture of the 3,427-ton steel vessel was obtained in San Francisco several years ago by H. B. Elworthy, president of the Island Tug & Barge Company Limited, a former owner of the ship, who found the photographium a unique addition to his marine memories.

This "Garden of Eden" is actually the interior of the log barge Carrier after two years as part of the Powell River breakwater. One following her damaging fire at Port Alberni in 1934, ground was dumped by seas which washed over the vessel constantly. Trees grow as high as 15 feet above the one-time sailing ship was in service when the fire closed her career. (Photo by Ken Smith.)

The Ship That Had a Garden

By BRUCE LOWTHER

A fabulous career behind her, the log barge Island Carrier—once a four-masted sailing ship—will soon be back at work along the Pacific Coast, nine years after she was nearly destroyed by fire.

The ship, now owned by the Badwater Towing Company, a subsidiary of the Crown Zellerbach timber corporation, is being renovated and rebuilt at the Victoria Machinery Depot so that she can carry bigger logs from the busy lumber mills to export ports in British Columbia and the State of Washington.

Much of the ship's early history has been lost, but it is known that she was unique even before she was launched by Russell & Company, of Glasgow, in 1892.

She was built of steel, which even in that late period in the history of sailing vessels was considered unusual for such ships.

Her registered tonnage was 3427; length 329.9 feet; beam 47 feet, and depth 27 feet. She was as solid and strong a sailing ship for her cargo-carrying duties as had been seen in Glasgow for many years. The Island Carrier was first named the Somali.

'ROUND WORLD

An unnamed Dutch shipping firm purchased the Somali around the turn of the century, giving her the new name of Amsterdam and plowing her on many runs, including some to the rich Dutch colonies in South east Asia.

There apparently was a big demand in those days for four masted, two-decked bark, because the Amsterdam was soon sold this time to a firm of German registry.

Again her name was changed this time to Adolf Vinnen and it is believed that her duties included transportation of war materials in the First World War for enemy forces.

By 1920 time had caught up to almost all of the world's sailing vessels, sweeping them aside and leaving the field of sailing open to champion yachts.

A NEW OWNER

But there was still work for the newest of the proud craft, and that included the Adolf Vinnen. It would appear that the German owners had to dispose of her after the war, and the next owner was the American Dollar Line, which put the ship to use on one of its many cargo routes during the post-war period.

But time caught up to the ship, now known as the Mae Dollar, and she, too, had to find a new life. Not for her the thrills of racing or the quiet of an old berth as she rotted away.

North America was growing by leaps and bounds and there was a huge demand for lumber everywhere, not only on this continent but in all parts of the world.

Around 1930 a Pacific Coast mariner, Captain B. L. Johnson, purchased the Mae Dollar.

AS LOG BARGE

She was converted into the log barge Pacific Carrier and operated for the Pacific Coast Navigation Company, managed by Captain Johnson, until Victoria became her home for a while in 1936.

H. B. Elworthy found there was a tremendous demand on his Island Tug & Barge Company in the thirties for huge pens of logs for towing along the coast.

Eighteen years ago Mr. Elworthy bought three ships for the log-towing service, the Island Monarch, the Island Forester, still in operation, the Island Gatherer and the Island Carrier.

What had touched off the increased business was construction of the Rivers Inlet mill at Port Alberni, and the company also obtained rights for the Alberni Pacific Lumber Company.

Port Alberni was the focal point for the operation and right through the war, the Island Carrier was only one of many towboats, barges towed to Port Alberni from Fort Alice, Queen Lees and other points.

Then came an accident which came within an ace of closing out the hard-working life of the Carrier, a sentimental favorite of many of the men who had worked in and around her for years.

FIRE ABOARD

She caught fire in the Alberni Canal, at Port Alberni, and had to be sunk to extinguish the flames. This provided the people of the town with a spectacular show, but it also provided Island Tug & Barge with a few worries as to her future.

However, it was not too long before the Carrier went back to her favorite mode of life, hard work. The Powell River Company took her over for use as a breakwater at Powell River.

It seemed that the ship's days of glory were over, but Island Tug & Barge decided that it would take the vessel back if she could be put to good use and two years after the fire this was done. An old frigate [illegible] was purchased from VMD and towed to Powell River's spot in the Powell River breakwater line, while the one-time bark [illegible] back to Victoria.

GARDEN IN HOLD

Workers found they had a big job on their hands cleaning out the "Garden of Eden" which had formed inside her while she spent nine hard years on the line. The seas had washed piles of dirt inside the vessel's commodious hull, bare to the wind and waves, and bushes and trees had grown as high as 15 feet while the sun and rain beat down.

The "garden" was cleaned out and the ship went back into service for Island Tug & Barge until she and other former sailing vessels were sold to Crown Zellerbach last year.

It has been explained that [illegible] Zellerbach plans to reduce towing of logs and instead will place them inside the Carrier, which will be towed between the [illegible] Washington.

Three new beams have been put in, where there used to be five beams, to allow the ship to carry logs up to 45 feet long, instead of chips of log fuel.

Long gone is the Garden of Eden. Several years after the Carrier returned to Island Tug & Barge Company service, and Victoria Machinery Depot employees [illegible] the vessel so that she can resume her place among those plying the Pacific coast. SOLUTION

One drop of wine probably has never hurt anyone. Nevertheless a verse of the Koran stipulates that "the first drop of wine is cursed."

Until recently that simple phrase had created numberless complications and problems for the chancelleries of the Arab countries, especially during diplomatic receptions. Now the Shah of Iran seems to have come up with a smart solution of the difficulty during the big feast he gave in his palace at Teheran.

The waiters were serving champagne, of which the monarch is said to be specially fond. The Moslem ruler dunked the tip of his finger into his glass and shook to the floor a drop of the golden liquid, saying:

"I obey the law of the prophet by taking out of my glass the cursed drop."

After that he emptied his glass with one draught, and the assembled guests did likewise.

BARED

The wife of a farmer named Soerensen, in Schleswig Holstein, Germany, sprayed her husband's toupee with rich powder, when he was about to go to meet a young girl he had been assiduously and illicitly courting.

The method proved effective: the man had to lift his wig to scratch his scalp; the girl laughed, left him, and scorned his efforts to date her again.

Gish of Silents Thinks Movies Talk Too Much

By HAROLD HEFFERNAN

A lot of solid-thinking movie fans are beginning to wonder—and worry. Are motion pictures talking too much? Although the last two years have witnessed, as a complement to the wide cameras and screens, the development of more spectacular action films than ever before, there nevertheless has been a noticeable tendency recently on the part of many producers to overwrite the dialogue and let their characters chatter away like mad.

HOLD UP

At the request of the Paris police department four 13-year old girls will get a bawling out. They kissed a traffic cop and, while thus fervidly embracing him, one of them "lifted" the policeman's white stick. The youngsters needed it for a play they were staging at school.

THIS WEEK'S ANAGRAMS

RULES—How is your vocabulary? There is no better or more fascinating way to improve it than by solving these anagrams each Sunday. Add the letter in the first column, subtract the letter in the second column, and rearrange the letters so as to form a new word. EXAMPLE: PRINTER plus P minus N equals ??? Answer: TRIPPER. Can you solve the following anagrams?

(1)	PRECISE	PLUS	Y	MINUS	P	EQUALS	???
(2)	REELING	"	T	"	H	"	"

THIS WEEK'S PROFILE

Most of the lower end of the Island then was policed from headquarters in the old court house on Bastion Street. In early days there were only 17 or 18 police officers on the whole of Vancouver Island.

Keeping order was a rough job. "I was in a fight almost every night," Bob says ruefully.

He subdued with his fists a "bad Indian" who was terrorizing the Sooke reserve; and stalked and overpowered a gun-happy bandit who had fired at him on Helmcken Road.

IN WARTIME

Bob Owens joined the army in 1916 on leave of absence and went overseas for three years, first with the artillery and then with the Canadian Military Police.

In 1924 after reorganization of the force he was promoted sergeant, in charge of Victoria police district. Other steps up the ladder followed: 1929, staff-sergeant, acting officer commanding "A" division (then the whole of Vancouver Island); 1931 sub-inspector, confirmed as officer commanding; 1932, full inspector.

When the United States tried prohibition shipping liquor to replace the American thirst became a major Canadian industry.

For a long time there was no legal restriction on the export of liquor. Canadian boats cleared customs and transferred their cargo this side of the boundary to high-powered American vessels.

RUM-RUNNERS

The American rum-runners trusted to their skill and cunning to dodge coast guard cutters and land their cargo at a profit of 1,000 per cent. The Americans took most of the risk and earned the biggest profits.

Many of Victoria's solid citizens had a hand in the liquor smuggling business.

As the amount of money involved in rum-running grew larger, the hi-jacker appeared. He was an armed bandit with a fast boat who seized the rum-runner's cargo by force. When he invaded Canadian waters, robbed, injured and killed Canadian citizens, Canadian police stepped in.

Bob Owens had a hand in tracking down Harry F. Sowash and Owen D. Baker, who killed William J. Gillis and his son William and hi-jacked the liquor cargo of their boat the Beryl G, off Sidney Island. They went to the gallows.

Bob traveled to San Francisco to pick up Milo Eggers, one of the notorious Eggers brothers, but the hi-jacker escaped before he could take him in custody. Ariel Eggers was accidentally shot to death during the escape by brother Theodore. A year or so later, Theodore Eggers' headless body was found floating in the ocean. He was the victim of a gangland execution.

Later, new Canadian regulations made rum-running a tougher proposition. For various reasons, many cargoes of illicit liquor were seized by police here and poured down the drain.

Among Bob Owens' interesting tasks was going to Chicago to bring back the Victoria narcotics dealer Wong Wah. He guarded eminent persons ranging from King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to President Roosevelt and the King of Siam.

LUCKY NUMBER

All through Bob Owens' life, 13 has been his lucky number. One of his first big police jobs was in connection with the Nanaimo riots, Aug. 13, 1913. He sailed from Canada on Friday the 13th, was warned for an overseas draft in England on the 13th of the month, and went to France the 13th of the next month.

When he was wounded, he rode in ambulance No. 13. He was promoted sergeant in his 13th year. He was issued identity card No. 13, and his regimental number was 31—13 reversed.

Even criminals show liking and respect for this tough, kindly Irishman. Bob went to Seattle to bring back Johnston and Stone for their part in a $12,000 Nanaimo bank holdup. Johnston was so grateful for Bob Owens' considerate treatment that he gave Bob his watch before he went to jail.

Bob checked with the attorney-general's department to see if he could accept it. He could providing Johnston signed a paper conveying it to him. Bob also checked in San Francisco to see whether Johnston had really bought the watch. Sure enough, it was legitimate.

He still keeps the watch as a prized possession.

GAUCHO

The cockatoo is an important personage in rural Paraguay and in the adjoining areas of Argentina. He watches over the ranch, announces visitors, sings lullabies to make children go to sleep, and performs an infinity of other tasks around the "estancia".

Even so the parrot story which Argentine writer F. Rodolfo Alvarez relates appears a bit strange. At Estancia de Campo near Asuncion Alvarez says he found one of those green-and-red birds working as a farmhand. At sunrise the feather-gaucho would leave the farmhouse to bring in the cows, driving them with yells into the corral for milking.

A Royal Yacht Ends Her Days

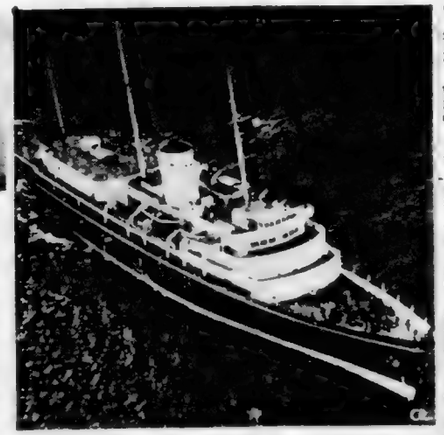
By DAVID ENGLAND

THE gallant Victoria and Albert, for half a century known familiarly to the Royal Navy as the V and A, most famous of all royal yachts, will sail no more. No more will she make stately progress reviewing long lines of powerful British warships. She is being prepared for breaking up.

At the end of the war King George VI decided to hand her over to the charge of the commodore, Royal Naval Barracks, Portsmouth, on a care and maintenance basis. She was to be used for residential purposes only when the Royal Family visited Portsmouth. At sea she has now been replaced by the highly up-to-date Britannia.



The new Royal Yacht "Britannia."

During the last war the V and A was used for gunnery training and was included in the ships of the Royal Navy. Until she was laid off, she was kept permanently in commission, and her company of 367 officers and men was the largest yacht's crew in the world. The office of "Keeper and Steward of the Royal Cabins," held by a warrant officer was unique in the service.

SPEED 20 KNOTS

The third to bear the name the Victoria and Albert was a beautiful and stately vessel, of 4,700 tons displacement, with a pronounced clipper bow overhanging stem, two funnels and three raking masts. At sea she could raise 20 knots, on active service she was one of the few remaining vessels to burn coal.

Queen Victoria liked the sea and when she visited Scotland in 1842 she sailed in the old Royal George, which was towed by steamers. The hand-steering wheels and pinnacles of the present V. and A. came from the Royal George.

The next year the Queen made a round of the seaport towns in the first vessel to bear the name of Victoria and Albert—the first royal yacht, too, to be propelled by steam.

The second Victoria and Albert, launched a dozen years later, was a handsome vessel, which brought over King Edward VII's bride, Princess Alexandra, from Denmark. Years later she took part in the sad procession from the Isle of Wight, when Queen Victoria's body was brought ashore for burial.

QUEEN'S ORDER

Just two years earlier Queen Victoria had given orders for the laying down of the third Victoria and Albert, but she did not live to sail in her. Unfortunately the Queen was head strong where her own particular whims were concerned and considerable confusion arose in consequence.

She insisted, for instance, that the rooms should be exactly the same size as those in the old yacht, so that she could use the same furniture and fittings. Further confusion was caused when the Tsar of Russia sent the measurements of his own yacht, which the Queen wanted incorporated in the new one. Naval architects protested but their ideas were overruled.

In consequence so many alterations were made that when she took to the water for the first time she nearly met with disaster. She listed and almost turned turtle. The result was that it was not until 1855 that the V and A was eventually commissioned.

Throughout her long career her beauty of line exceeded her seagoing qualities. Perhaps her most famous voyage was in 1905 when King George V took her after a serious illness. This was the furthest the V and A traveled from her home port.

COINS OF LUCK

Service on the royal yacht is always considered a notable distinction. In their oldfashioned cloth trousers with their badges and rank striped in white instead of the usual gold on red the crew carried out their duties on the V and A with remarkable efficiency.

The ship was kept spotless from end to end, the decks were, literally, fit to eat off, and the engine room was burnished to almost dazzling brightness. No spoken order was ever given, everything being done by gestures. The crew were rubber soled shoes; so almost uncanny silence prevailed.

Perhaps one of the most precious relics the ship used to carry was a tattered white flag. It was the one which was found flying above the tent containing the bodies of Captain Scott and his gallant companions on their return journey from the Pole. It had been brought back by the search-party which discovered Scott.

But there are other relics on board the V and A too, in particular a unique collection of coins buried beneath the ship's masts. These coins have been presented by successive sovereigns. For instance when the mizzen mast was removed the other day, a half-sovereign, five-shilling piece and a half-crown were found. They had been given by King George V. A sovereign, a five-shilling piece and a sixpence, gifts from Queen Victoria, are under the footing of the mainmast, and under the foremast are a sovereign and a penny, the gifts of Edward VII and Prince of Wales.

A Voice

BY LAURA BENET

Why was the voice that came
Over the telephone and wholly strange
Singularly the same
As one his childhood heard
With mounting joy like a familiar bird
Whose utterance did not change,
Better than news of fame
Or praise from a great name?

The new voice was not young
Yet love of life breathed from its every note
Its hearing must have spring
From some perpetual country of unspent
That never knew a frontier
Where from each great sea throw
In many a phrase for me
Golden words answering

Like this in speaking kind
Another's face had been
Skilful a world to wind
The tired man emerged from his dark wood
Fearing lest cruel mind
Gave space where he might lean
Spoiled refuge for his head
Bewildered and long blind

New Test Drug Speeds Up Process of Psychoanalysis

By THOMAS R. HENRY

A DRUG, for the supposedly purposes of psychoanalysis, has been developed by Dr. Joost A. M. Meerloo, a psychiatrist of Columbia University.

Dr. Meerloo has found that by injecting a solution of sodium amytal into the veins of the patient, the latter's resistance to psychoanalysis is greatly reduced. The patient is then in a state of "twilight sleep" and can be questioned by the psychoanalyst.

Dr. Meerloo has used the drug in a few instances with what he considers successful results. He says that psychoanalysts strive for swinging qualities. Perhaps her most famous voyage was in 1905 when King George V took her after a serious illness. This was the furthest the V and A traveled from her home port.

"I'LL CRY—— Tomorrow"

By LILLIAN ROTH

With Mike Connolly and Gerold Frank

Lillian Roth's childhood was a continuous round of producers' offices matron parlors into vaudeville wings and theatre backstages. Eventually her mother Rose's determined efforts and the talents Lillian developed brought fame and high salaries, but no happiness before she was called to Hollywood to appear in "The Love Parade" with Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald.

CHAPTER IV

I HAD only a waving acquaintance with David Lyons at Clark School of Concentration. I was fourteen, then, and he was nineteen. But he was to become important to me during those first few months in Hollywood.

Junior Laemmle phoned me one night and asked me to go for a drive. On the way he said, "I forgot to tell you—you know, we've got a school friend living over in North Hollywood. I know he'd like us to stop in and say hello."

David's smile lit up the room when we came into his living room. I began thinking that perhaps Leo Fox wasn't the only boy in the world. David was brimful of personality, and exuded charm and good spirits. He was working for Junior as an assistant director.

We talked about Leo, whom he knew and liked, and about our school days at Clark.

ALL FOR DAVID

A few nights later David took me to the opening of Junior's first picture. His letters to Leo became fewer, his answers to me more infrequent. It wasn't always easy, because Hollywood's caste system kept us apart. The studio insisted that I was a star, and ought not to be seen too often with David, for he was only an assistant director. Thus, he was never invited to the studio parties to which I was asked, although those who extended the invitations knew we were going together. David took it in good spirit.

"I don't want to be a heel taking away another fellow's girl," David finally confessed.

"You're not taking me from Leo Fox. My romance with him was puppy love. David, it's the real thing with you."

We began to talk about marriage. As the weeks passed, my mother Katie grew more and more concerned. She upbraided me. I was only at the beginning of a career that could take me to the heights. "Oh," she cried, "when I think of the youth and beauty and talent you're ready to throw away for that boy——"

Katie's apprehension, in part stemmed from a fact more evident to her than to me: how seriously ill David was. I did not realize it until one afternoon when he suffered a violent coughing spell and spat up blood. The doctor after examining him took me aside.

"Don't you know?" he said. "This young man is tuberculular."

I was shocked. David was sick. And because he was sick, needed me, I loved him the more.

A NIGHT OUT

One night David and I went away across the Mexican border to Tijuana. Perhaps I would break the promise I'd made to Katie that I wouldn't consider marriage before I was 21. I was 21. I persuaded myself that was the right reasoning. We eloped, David was ill, and I mothered him through the long hours to dawn.

BEST SELLER

Miss Roth's book, "I'll Cry Tomorrow," led all book sales across the country according to a New York Times survey. Thousands of letters have been received by the authors commending the work.

Paramount had tested nearly 150 girls for the role of Huguette, in "The Vagabond King," a major production. He explained that Huguette was a woman of the streets, about 32, and the sweetheart of the poet Francois Villon. Some of the top stars in Hollywood coveted the role.

"Now," he said, "I want you to go across the lot to Ludwig Berger, who's directing the picture. Tell him I want you tested for Huguette."

Mr Berger exclaimed: "My God, I asked for another Pola Negri and they send me a Louise Fazenda." He stared at me. "Not only that you look 14 years old. This calls for a woman with fire."

He groaned: "Go to the wardrobe department and get fitted and be here tomorrow night at nine o'clock."

ACTED IT OUT

I woke next morning with a fever of 101 and a voice that was more like a croak. I had dengue fever. The doctor's diagnosis was grippe.

But shortly before nine o'clock I appeared on the lot. I waited.

At midnight I found a blanket in a corner and crawled under it, shivering, alternately dozing and waking. At 2 a.m. Mr Berger shouted: "Miss Roth!"

I staggered over to him. "This is a death scene," said Mr Berger. "Let's see you die."

That was exactly what I wanted to do. I recited my lines in a sepulchral voice, closed my eyes slowly and died.

"Wunderbar!" Mr Berger threw his arms around me and kissed me. The role of Huguette was mine. I was the new dramatic find of the year. I had the plum part in the first all-musical Technicolor!

David, now working as night director at Universal shooting "Frankenstein," so that I could spend more time with me, began to get me his first car, a Cadillac roadster. Forward motion, moving, I drove the 101 daily to the studios on North Hollywood. We got very little sleep but we were rapturously in love, and all was well no matter how many clouds might disappear.

STAR SHINING

The news I brought to David from the mail room was exciting. My fan mail was pouring in. Several days a week I would get to Paramount's negligible post.

Darling, David said, that's the way you're really made in Hollywood. Not by the studio but by the public.

Another photo of Lillian Roth in her glamour days in Hollywood (in centre of Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald and others).

Paramount publicity capitalized on my popularity by casting me in "Sing You Sinners." he said. "Sing You Sinners" became a triple-column ad and was identified with me for years afterward.

I came home nights to argue violently with mother. I simply must stop seeing David, she cried. It was affecting my work and my health. He had no real interest in my career.

She was under great pressure because David's parents had telephoned her several times from New York. They were deeply concerned. The boy's health, they said, was failing. David and I kept write only passing him off as "sick." But because this they made me feel that I would never permit him to marry a girl in show business.

Jesse Lasky brought Buddy De Sylva to the studio to replace Jesse Lasky. His world was law. I was able to play a love interest in the Marx Brothers' new picture, "Animal Crackers," being shot in New York. What neither my mother nor Lasky's parents had been able to accomplish—separating David and me—was done by a conference-table decision from Paramount's front office.

My opening at the movies with Paramount was everywhere. It came after I made one more picture, "Sap Legs with Jack Oakie. His final show was the Broadway production of "Ziegfeld Follies" and I was invited to see it. Before the curtain rose on the first act, I received a telegram from David. He was in New York. Darling, you're not to go to the Palace and top the bill.

We argued in New York by telephone three of the nights I was running simultaneously on Broadway. But the pull of me was forced to admit to myself that David was suffering unusual spells of vertigo and dizziness. The day I was to go on at the Palace with Jack Benny David was taken to hospital for tests. "To think I have to miss you at the Palace!" he lamented.

When I opened at the Palace the second time, two years later, co-headlining with Walter Winchell and Harry Richman, David was still in the hospital. After three experiments upon him the verdict of the doctors was brain disease. Surgery was incoherent much of the time.

miracle at nine

"Oh, shut up and get out!" Marcia said irritably. Joe stood motionless . . . clenching his hands until the knuckles whitened.

JOSEPH CROMWELL, Assistant Professor of Psychology, Eastern State University, had a date with a beautiful redhead. He should have been quite happy. He would have, but for the fact that he was married to a blonde. To make the situation more complicated, Kitty Blair, the girl with the gleaming auburn tresses, was a student in his course.

"Fine psychologist I am!" Joe said disgustedly to the mirror in his room. "A pretty woman catches my eye, two weeks later I'm married and then I find out what she's really like!"

Joe gave his tie an unnecessary adjustment and thought of the meeting with Kitty. He had promised her tonight he would have a solution. Marcia, his wife, had seemed more reasonable the last time he talked with her, he reflected. She should see matters his way now. It wasn't as if she loved him, or ever had.

Joe walked down the hallway and knocked on the door of her room.

"I want to talk to you, Marcia."

"Come in," Marcia called.

Joe entered. Marcia was dressed in a low-cut black gown. She was sitting down and applying the finishing touches to her make-up. Long blond hair, carefully brushed, fell to the marbled perfection of white shoulders.

"Well, what do you want?" she asked irritably.

"About the divorce, Marcia. You know our marriage is nothing to either of us now. You can file the suit on any decent grounds you choose. My lawyer will handle it for you. I'll give you the house and a fair alimony."

"Oh, shut up and get out!"

Joe stood motionless for a moment, resentment rising within him. He clenched his hands until the knuckles whitened then turned and walked from her room.

Sitting dejectedly in his study Joe thought back to when he first met Marcia. He was in Miami on terminal leave from the Air Force. After the years overseas, her beauty had dazzled him until he thought of nothing else. Even now her past was a mystery to him.

She started to change before the ink was dry on their marriage certificate. He tried to make their life more than a mockery of the ceremony, but Marcia wasn't interested. She soon made it perfectly clear that his attentions bored her. Also, that she didn't want to alter the marriage by divorce, threatening scandal and headlines if he sued for one.

His thoughts turned to Kitty Blair. All the things he loved about Kitty became vivid in his mind. The coppery-red hair, the melody of her voice, the warmth that lifted his spirit each time their eyes met across the classroom. From that first glance, Joe knew he wanted Kitty to be a part of the rest of his life.

Joe looked at his watch. Seven-forty-five. An hour and fifteen minutes until he was to meet her.

"What can I tell Kitty now?" Joe asked himself. "Where do we go from here?"

Suddenly Joe knew what to do. He walked to the wall safe and worked the combination with swift, quiet movements. He opened the safe door and lifted out a heavy metal box. Raising the top, he removed his savings, almost five thousand dollars in cash and bonds. He locked the strongbox, replaced it and closed the door.

I can't offer Kitty less than marriage, Joe thought, and any divorce proceedings I start here will see her cheapened unfairly. A Mexican divorce only requires three days, and we can be married there as soon as the decree is granted.

Joe walked quickly from the house and hailed a cab by the corner drug-store. There's a plane tonight we can take, he reflected. Kitty and I will find a new life together. We'll have warm, lovely days on some sandy beach.

"And after that?" he asked himself. Well, there were other jobs, other towns.

The cab pulled up in front of the Mayflower Hotel a few minutes later. Joe paid the driver and entered the lobby. It was eight fifteen by the lobby clock. He was forty-five minutes early. He continued on into the bar.

He ordered a Martini. An occasional drink was a good thing, he mused. He remembered he hadn't touched the stuff before he entered the Air Force, still didn't care much about it. A few drinks while on pass had always brought a welcome relaxation, he recalled. It helped a man get out from under the pressure for a while . . . a temporary escape . . . sort . . . of . . .

It hit him then! That's what he was doing, running away. He wasn't really solving a thing. Sure, Kitty loved him enough to do what he wished, but what would be the cost to her?

Joe's short-lived elation left, and he stood there discouraged. He realized he must tell Kitty tonight that it was no use, that Marcia had the upper hand. Nothing but a miracle . . .

Joe leaned against the bar and felt the bulk of the money and bonds pressing against his side. He reached a hand to shift them. A glimmer of hope flashed in his mind. A meal ticket was all he had ever been to Marcia, a means of getting the things she wanted. Maybe, just maybe, he thought, if I go to her and offer her my savings, the car, and the house, she will change her mind.

Joe glanced at his watch. Eight-thirty-five. He had time to make the attempt and get back to the hotel lobby before Kitty came. He threw a bill at the bartender and ran for the door.

The whirling propellers of the giant Constellation synchronized into one roaring sound. Silvery wings lifted the huge plane off the runway. Gaining height it turned and flew southward. Inside the cabin a couple relaxed in adjoining seats, holding hands.

"I'm glad you changed your mind," the man said.

"You really needn't have worried, darling. It was just a matter of what was the best thing for us to do under the circumstances."

"Did you get the money?"

"I have it and the bonds with me. The strongbox is locked. I had to put it in my overnight case. The bonds are in both our names. I'll get the strongbox opened and cash them in New Orleans tomorrow." The blond-haired woman placed one hand on her sleek, swarthy companion's arm.

"He wanted a 'divorce' so bad! What a laugh! I'd like to see his face when he finds my note tonight and learns he and I were never legally married, that my divorce from you was never final, Carlos." Marcia smiled contemptuously in the dim light of the reading lamp overhead. She thought of the lovely, expensive clothes she would buy in New Orleans tomorrow.

"Joe can have his 'divorce'—he's paying for it," she said.

The hands of the wrist watch on the arm of the trim stewardess walking up the aisle just then pointed to nine o'clock.

This Week's Profile

By G. E. Mortimore

INSPECTOR Robert Owens, one of the legendary figures of the old Provincial Police, had a boyhood ambition to be a railroad man. But he became a metal worker and a plasterer instead, and eventually joined the police force almost by accident.

After nearly 39 years of battling fish pirates, rum runners, hi-jackers, dope pushers and thieves, he lives quietly in Victoria. He spent his entire period of service—18 years of it as an inspector—operating from this city.

Of all the bootleg liquor he had a hand in seizing, Bob Owens never took a drink from a single bottle of it.

In a way I wish I had," he says ruefully "because nobody believes me."

The short, athletic Irishman was nearly turned down for the police force as too small, but he soon proved himself as tough as men twice his size.

A GUN BATTLE

He vividly remembers the night in 1913 when he lay flat on his stomach atop a fish trap at Sooke, exchanging rifle fire with a boatload of pirates who had come over from the American side to steal salmon.

One of Bob Owens' jobs then was to patrol the fish traps from Beachy Head to Muir Creek (Jordan River). He arrived at the Sooke traps in time to catch the pirates lowering the side of a net to get the contents. They escaped after a gun battle.

A week or so later, they came back to the Otter Point trap. This was the occasion when Bob Owens was on top of the "spiller" trap, and the raiders opened fire from the street, shooting out on the planks without much effect. However, he returned their fire and they sheered off.

THIEVES ABOARD

Another time he had just returned from an all-night patrol at Sooke when he was ordered back there again to tackle a big robbery of foodstuffs from Todds' stores. The thief in a series of thefts.

He followed a trail of spilled beans to the waterfront, hired a launch and searched all boats with no result, then happened on another boat concealed under a waterside tree. The boat was loaded with foodstuffs bearing Canadian labels. The two Americans aboard said they had bought the goods in Victoria a patent falsehood.

Bob Owens ordered them to bring the boat alongside the dock. Instead, they headed toward the straits. The policeman felt a gun muzzle in his back. Fighting mad, he whirled around and hit the man. "That's how I broke this finger," he says, displaying a scar.

He tumbled the man overboard. Then he grabbed the burly man at the wheel with a chunk of firewood and knocked him cold.

Meanwhile the other man had swum to shore. Leaving the captive at the oar of some men who had gathered, Bob Owens tackled the swimmer through the bush and arrested him at a farmhouse.

Few people know that after he arrested the two men in the boat and treated them to a couple of rounds of drinks, then brought them in. The kindly action is typical of "tough-but-gentle" Bob Owens.

"Today, if you go to Sooke, they think I'm the toughest man in the world," says Bob in his gruff voice. "They don't know how scared I was that day in the boat."

RETURN BOUT

Twenty years later, there was a wave of rowboat thefts at Deep Cove and Brentwood. A man approached Bob Owens and said he was the culprit and wanted to give himself up. It was the thief who had been at the wheel of that boat.

"You . . . I should have killed you at Sooke," said Bob. The man said he was desperate and had no money. Instead of arresting him, the policeman gave him $5 for boat fare to Vancouver, a bunk and meals.

His confidence was misplaced. Next day two or three more boats were gone. Bob Owens traced the man to Friday Harbor on the American side. The man escaped, but 18 boats were recovered. Adding insult to injury, their owners had to pay duty to get them back.

Bob Owens was born on February 18, 1885 at Bangor, County Down, a suburb of Belfast. His father, James Owens, was a plasterer. Bob was brought to Canada while he was still an infant, and after a year or two in Toronto the family moved to Victoria.

Mr. Owens senior worked on the Parliament Buildings and the Bamfield cable station building, among other projects. Bob was at Bamfield one summer. He helped pull the cable ashore and hauled the lumber to build the station.

A CASEY JONES

Bob went to Kings Road school in Victoria. He was railroad-crazy. He used to get free rides on the old Victoria and Sidney Railway by helping load wood to fire the boilers, and earned the supreme reward of being allowed to ring the bell.

He wanted to be an engine wiper on the E. and N. Railway, with the aim of becoming an engineer, but there were no vacancies. So he served his apprenticeship as an iron and brass molder at the old Albion Iron Works. Wages the first year: five cents an hour for a ten-hour day. He eked out his pay by feeding fellow employees' horses and looking after dinner pails.

The Albion Iron Works burned down just after he had completed his apprenticeship. He took a job with Marine Iron Works.

His father persuaded him to learn the plastering trade. "After he had served his apprenticeship, he worked on the construction of the Empress Hotel and other projects. He spent ten years as a plasterer, much of the time in partnership with his brother Norman.

ON THE FORCE

In 1911 he worked on the house of Bill Dunwoody, then policeman at Esquimalt, later assistant superintendent of the force. Dunwoody suggested that he join. So Bob went to see Superintendent Colin Campbell, who said he was too small and [illegible]

INSPECTOR ROBERT OWENS

Bob was a sinewy lacrosse and basketball player. "I'd like to see the man on the force who could catch me," he said as a parting shot.

A few days later a man came to see him at work and told him he had to report that day for duty. "I threw my tools away and I haven't seen 'em since," he says.

He became a constable at $75 a month, plain clothes and no clothing allowance. Travel was by horse and buggy rented from a livery stable. On patrols from Victoria to Muir Creek the constable had to keep the horse clean and groomed. At night he had to unharness feed and water the horse. Patrols took from two days to a week.

District News Roundup

H. Rupert Brown Seeks Reeveship

BRENTWOOD—Former Central Saanich councillor H. Rupert Brown announced yesterday he would run for reeve of the municipality in the elections next month.

Incumbent Reeve Sidney Pickles is not seeking re-election this year but Ch Willard Michell will be opposing Mr Brown for the reeveship.

Brown

Mr Brown is owner and operator of the City Brokerage in Victoria and lives at Brentwood Bay. He served a two-year term on Central Saanich council before being defeated by three votes at the last election.

Mr Brown has had considerable experience in road construction engineering work during seven years service with the Victoria city engineering department.

A Royal Canadian Air Force officer escaped with minor injuries when his car turned over in a spectacular accident on the Malahat early yesterday.

RCMP in Colwood said FO Gerald Helmut Kiel of the air force station at Comox was proceeding south when his automobile skidded on wet gravel on the shoulder of the road at Tunnel Hill.

Comedian Sues Film Actress

NEW YORK (AP)—Comedian Bobby Clark is suing actress Joan Blondell for $12,000 contending he lent that amount to her in 1948 and that she failed to repay it. The action came to light Friday when state supreme court Justice Irving L. Levey ordered deposition of Clark, Miss Blondell, ex-husband Dick Powell and Miss Blondell's ex-secretary Lillian Burns. Miss Blondell entered a general denial.

Modern Pioneer Designer Dies

MILTON, N.H. (AP)—Robert Edmund Jones, 66, a pioneer in modern stage design died Friday. He was associated early in his career with Eugene O'Neill and designed sets for John Barrymore's "Richard III" and "Hamlet."

Color, Charm, Romance Fill Old Heidelberg

Margaret Sanson, Victoria school teacher is in Germany to teach children of RCAF personnel stationed there. Her articles are designed primarily for younger readers.

BY MARGARET SANSON

When you visit Europe put Heidelberg on your list of "musts." Not only does it ooze charm and romance with its renowned university and the ruins of its imposing old castle, but it also has a strikingly beautiful location on the Neckar River which flows from the Odenwald Mountains through a long narrow valley between high wooded hills into the Rhine plain. Above the city rising to a height of 1,850 feet is the Kongstuhl (King's Throne), a mountain heavily wooded to its summit. The streets of Heidelberg are too narrow for its 120,000 inhabitants, pass its thousands of annual visitors and its shops are too small and too crowded but charm and historical romance abound.

Across the river from the city is the Holy Mountain which was a fortress about 500 B.C. when the Celts inhabited the upper Rhine and Danube Valleys. On its summit are the ruins of two former monasteries dedicated to St. Steven and St. Michael, one of which dates back to the 11th Century.

The most striking structures in Old Heidelberg are the Church of the Holy Ghost 1398, the Karl Theodor Bridge with its picturesque bridge gate and the historic student inns the Red Ox and the Seppl.

Heidelberg University is the oldest university in Germany. Founded in 1386 by the Elector Ruprecht I. We visited the Aula or main auditorium and the student prison. It was the ambition of most of the students to spend at least one night in jail and the prison walls are covered with drawings bearing the names of the imprisoned students. Many would famous names are written there.

Heidelberg Castle high on the hill above the university, was built primarily for defense and beginning of the 14th Century picturesque its moats though now over grown with tall brush and nearly 100 years grass are still in evidence as of the Electors Palatinate are its drawbridges. At the

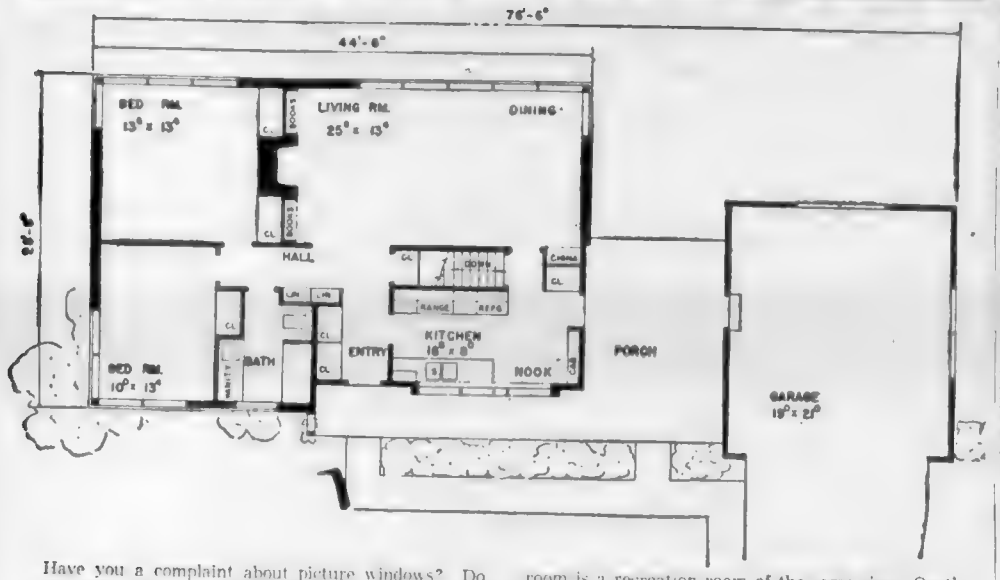
You Needn't Be in Public Eye



Have you a complaint about picture windows? Do you resent being in the public eye? Here is one answer. Place your service and sleeping areas on the street side of your house, and your living and dining areas to face the rear. You are now free to bring the outdoors inside via the big living-room windows. To this add high placed windows on the street side, and you will agree that this home is planned for privacy. Directly below the large living-room is a recreation room of the same size. On the blueprints, allowance has been made for a rear-sloping lot, so that recreation room may open into the garden, with a row of windows the same size as the living-room. (Inquiries about these plans can be addressed to Home Building in Canada, 2842 Bloor Street West, Toronto 18, Ont., referring to Plan No. HFS-299.)

Open House At UBC March 5

The University of British Columbia throws open all its doors on March 5 for its gigantic "Open House."

Both students and faculty members are already at work on plans for the biennial event which drew more than 50,000 people to the Point Grey campus in 1952.

Students' committee is headed by Jacques Barbe of first year law student. Associated with him are Walter Young, Victoria, vice-chairman; Frances Appleton, Victoria, secretary; Geoff Conway, Victoria, treasurer; Jim MacDonald, coordinator; Don McCallum, assistant coordinator; Gordon Armstrong, publicity; Alan Thackray, Victoria, traffic chairman; Brian Smith, Victoria, cubs coordinator, and John Bossons, West Vancouver, University Week chairman.

Faculty and staff members assisting with "Open House" include Dean Geoffrey C. Andrew, deputy to the president; Dr. Gordon M. Shrum, department of physics, director; Mr. John K. Friesen, extension; Arthur J. Renney, agronomy; Dr. Marvin Darrach, biochemistry head; Dr. James B. Brown, physics; Gordon Selman, extension; Dorothy Colyell, information officer, and Arthur H. Sager, executive secretary, Alumni Association.

Tiger-Stripe Wheelbarrow Simple Gift for Youngster

Under the tree December 25 this bright-orange tiger barrow will catch the eye of any pre-school youngster.

And a few hours in your workshop will furnish it up bright and shiny for Christmas. Light and strong, it can be used in play around the house and out of doors.

The wheelbarrow shown here is cut by following the tiger pattern drawn on a 20x[illegible] inch piece of ¾-inch plywood. Two one-inch-square guides are first marked off on the plywood to help you keep front and rear end of the barrow at right angles.

Lower end and front of the barrow are also made of the same ¾-inch stock.

Lumber consists of handles made from 1x2-inch stock and framing pieces cut from 1x4-inch stock. The wheel can be [illegible] dime store. The wheel can be painted [illegible] to suit the youngster.

Paint used is orange and black stripes as shown and it can even have a practical value if your youngster can be taught to pick up his other toys in it and wheel them out of the way.

UBC Receives Fellowship Applications

The University of British Columbia Department of Extension has received announcements and application forms for Eugene F. Saxton Memorial Trust fellowships established by Harper and Brothers, New York publishers, in memory of their late chief literary editor.

The fellowships are generally granted for one year and may reach $2,500. They are designed to encourage distinguished writing in fiction, poetry, biography, history, criticism and the essay, as well as outstanding reporting, needed popularizations of knowledge and original interpretations of cultural trends.

Applicants must have an outline of their project and a portion of completed work to submit with their applications. Information is available in the University of British Columbia Department of Extension.

Ejection Seat Kills Officer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United States air force pilot was killed Friday when he was accidentally hurled through the plastic canopy of his jet trainer plane while waiting to take off from Andrews air force base. Lieut.-Col. Glenn E. Davis, 39, apparently accidentally touched off the emergency ejection mechanism.

Handy Baking Counter

Rotating Shelves Fill Up Corner

Here's an idea for a baking and mixing counter that takes advantage of every inch of space in a kitchen corner.

Using a "Lazy Susan" construction, this compact plywood corner counter can be built at home by any handyman prepared to tackle cabinets, or it can be readily built for you by a carpenter.

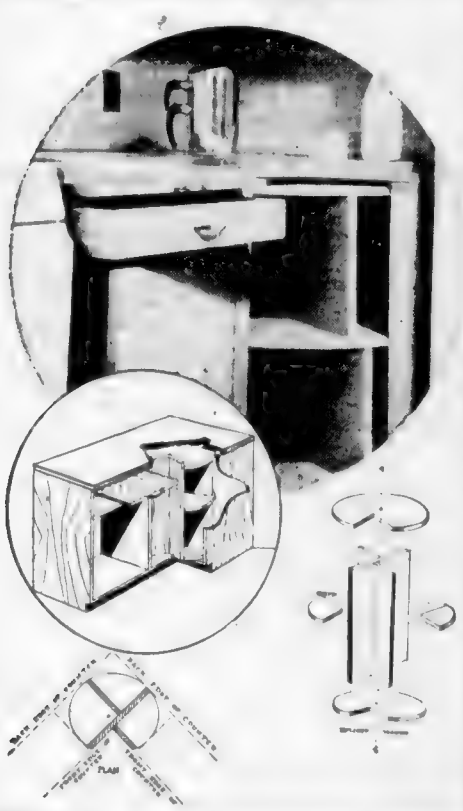
Not only does it use all valuable space in the corner but it brings baking ingredients readily to hand when needed. Ideally situated, the counter is placed in between a range and refrigerator which are on adjoining walls.

Details of the rotating Lazy Susan shelves are indicated and both the necessary hardware and plywood are readily available.

Dimensions of the unit are adjusted to the corner and are made so that the unshelved section exactly closes off the opening and acts as a door when swung into place. Big advantage of the rotating shelves is that all baking materials can be stored on them and quickly swung to the front when needed. It not only saves space but many steps as well.

The rest of the cabinet is of standard construction. The unit is three feet high, with a two-foot-wide working surface on top. Drawers and the handy cutting board come right up under the ¾-inch plywood counter, making use of the last inch of storage space.

Modern kitchen cabinets built of plywood without frames give a smooth job. Doors open the full width of the cabinet, there are no framing members to catch dust or form corners and shelves can be used to the full. They are easily cleaned.



Still Jaunty Entertainer

Maurice Chevalier Marks Fifty-Fifth Year on Stage

PARIS (AP) — Jaunty Maurice Chevalier is marking his 55th year in show business by getting ready to sail his famous straw hat right into the living room.

The reformed slapstick vaudeville star of a half century ago thinks television provides another stage perhaps a better one for the witty songs, soft shoe shuffle and rakishly tilted headgear that have made him a favorite the world over.

Now 66 but looking no more than 50, Chevalier's latest song hit is "Today I Am 20."

His present plans which change frequently include a film to be made in France and England, a television series, a film with Bob Hope, a tour of Scandinavia, an appearance on Broadway, and a Hollywood movie.

GETTING TIRED

While contemplating all those, Chevalier admits his feet are tiring after a lifetime of running from stage doors to railway stations. He would like to do TV shows from his own luxurious home with an outdoor stage.

"My big dream is to watch the whole world from here," he says with a wave around his home.

"The question of being too old can be a little embarrassing if you stay on the stage. You might pity an old actor not doing too well but if you stay at home you are still a gentleman. You are at home. It's a new life that appeals to me now."

He considers his current one-man show at the Champs Elysees Theatre among his best. He is on stage for two hours, no mean feat for a man of his years whose mastifying charm depends heavily on a throaty voice, straw hat, cane and Parisian leer. And he still appears hale and hearty enough to make the leer convincing.

VISA TROUBLES OVER

Chevalier is happy that his visa troubles with the U.S. are over. The U.S. embassy recently gave him his visa without question after earlier turning him down because he casually signed a Communist-inspired peace petition.

"I have no politics," Chevalier shrugs. "You can't succeed in France for 50 years and be a politician. Even the politicians can't do it."

Woman Ends Years in Pigsty

CAIAZZO, Italy (AP) — A 30-year-old woman was liberated from a pigsty, where she had been a chained prisoner for four years. Police arrested her 77-year-old father.

They charged Salvatore Mone with "brutal mistreatment" of his daughter, Fortunata.

A police spokesman said Mone appeared sane but gave no reason for what he had done. The woman said she never knew why her father kept her in chains in this south Italian village.

there are endless possibilities for better living when your entire basement is remodelled with Sylvaply. A cheerful family activity room, for instance, is "standard equipment" in many homes. Storage walls to partition rooms, handsome practical built-ins, shelving, cupboards and playroom furniture can all be built with rigid self-framing Sylvaply. You can panel walls and ceiling with Sylvaply or one of the low-cost decorative plywoods. You could have a bright little bachelor suite, a modern laundry room, a preserve room — and room to spare for a well-equipped home workshop. You'll probably find more ideas than you can find space for, but that's all part of the fun. Easy to saw, easy to nail, easy to paint, the smooth sanded Sylvaply panels are a real buy — whether you're doing the work yourself or having it done for you.

CANADA'S BUSIEST REMODELLING MATERIAL

See your local lumber dealer — he'll estimate the cost of materials or recommend a reliable contractor. Basements in Many Homes Become Ideal TV Theatres

Isn't evolution wonderful? In the paleolithic age man came home from hunting the brontosaurus and spent the evening sitting in a dark cave watching the flames of a flickering fire. Today, after several millions of years of progress, Co man comes home from raiding the illusive buck and spends the evening in a darkened room watching the screen of a flickering TV set.

MOVE TO BASEMENT

And in many cases modern man still does his mateking in a "cave" because according to the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating, many Canadian families have transported their TV sets to the basement. Here they have constructed, in what was formerly wasted space, a proper theatre in which TV can be watched comfortably in surroundings planned and furnished specifically for this purpose.

The idea of a TV theatre in the home commends itself for many reasons. To begin with, the whole family does not always want to be TViewing at the same time. Some prefer one program, others have their own favorites. In some families, strange as it may seem, there are members who often do not want to look at TV at all, but will spend as much as an hour in some other occupation, such as reading.

POORLY PLANNED

Further most living rooms into which TV has been "inserted" are poorly planned for this type of entertainment. Living room furniture is designed to be placed in a more or less circular arrangement around the walls of the room. This means either that it has to be rearranged in a rather ugly fashion to make TViewing easy, or the viewers have to crane their necks uncomfortably to see the show.

The basement, on the other hand, can be arranged to make an ideal TV theatre, plus a radio and gramaphone auditorium and general rumpus room as well, if you like. In older houses, where the heating plant might prove a problem because of its size or location, the possibility of replacing it with a modern plant should be considered. Not only would a new plant take care of the immediate problem, but in addition would provide the house with cheaper and more efficient heat.

PRIMARY FACTOR

Modernization of the heating plant has, in fact, been the primary factor in opening up the basement as a part of the living space of the house. And very valuable additional space it has proven to be. Calculated on the basis of pure rental value per square foot, it more than repays the cost of the new equipment with extra comfort in heating as a bonus.

Because of their compact design, modern heating plants take up relatively little space, and can frequently be accomodated in a small enclosure within the basement, together with both the fuel to supply them and self-stoking equipment if required. This leaves the majority of the basement space open to be converted into the TV theatre.

ROOM FOR VISITORS

Furnished with light, comfortable easy-to-move chairs, the theatre will accomodate both the family fans and a good complement of visiting viewers. Remote from the rest of the house, it leaves the other living rooms free for whatever other activities the rest of the family prefers. And since TV is usually viewed in dim light the absence of windows is no drawback.

With his own TV theatre underground "cave", our modern caveman can spend many an evening of relaxation, resting both mind and body after a hard day in the jungle of modern business life.

Motorists Face Stiffer Penalties For No License

Motorists who disregard driving privileges face increased penalties in Colwood, RCMP said yesterday.

Magistrate A. I. Thomas said in police court he would impose the maximum fine of $50 in future for driving without a license. Usual fine has been $25 but the magistrate increased the figure to $35 when Norman William Scott, 19, RMC's Naden, pleaded guilty to the charge yesterday.

Police said later that consideration was being given to imposing considerably higher fines for driving while under a license suspension.

Maximum fine for the offense is $500, with an alternative of six months in jail. Fines imposed in recent years have ranged from $50 to $300.

A six-month suspension of driver's license was meted out to Delmer Gerald Crow, 19, Jackson Road, Langford, in Colwood Court yesterday.

Magistrate Thomas also fined Crow $10 for driving without proper insurance for a minor. Crow pleaded guilty.

Arthur John Osterlin Sooke and Luxton Roads, was fined $10 in Colwood Court after admitting a charge of passing on the solid double line.

Losing track of license plates when he dismantled a 1929-model car cost Louis Todd, 340 Beckley, a fine of $10 in city police court yesterday.

Todd, who pleaded not guilty, said he sold or gave away parts of the car and "lost track" of the license plates.

"I guess the kids took them off the car," he said.

Police handed him an order from the Motor Vehicles Branch asking that the plates be surrendered and Todd, after took such action, but was charged soon after.

A Victoria electrician must have a Sidney trades license when he does any work in the village, Magistrate F. J. Baker told Lawrence Buckle of the Buckle Electric Company, Victoria, in Sidney police court yesterday.

Buckle at first entered a plea of not guilty but changed his plea after evidence was taken. He was fined $15 and costs, and ordered to pay a $10 trades license.

Bail of $250 was set in Sidney police court for John H. Hildreth, Victoria, charged with impaired driving after his arrest on Lochside Drive, Wednesday.

No plea was entered and Hildreth was remanded for one week so that he may obtain counsel.

Sticking Cabinet Doors Freed By Sandpapering, Paraffin

BY J. RALPH DALZELL
Author of Books on Home Building and Repair

Sticking and binding wooden cabinet drawers are annoying but they can be made to slide easily, and the homeowner can do the job himself.

Two common causes of sticking drawers are swelling and warping. Wood is apt to swell during prolonged periods of damp or humid weather and in localities close to large bodies of water. Swelling causes drawers and surrounding frame members to press against and stick to each other. Wood may warp when exposed to exceptionally dry and warm air, when parts twist slightly and bind.

Parts A and B of the illustration show a typical drawer and frame. The front drawer panels are often higher dimension "t") than the rails and back. Sometimes this additional height covers the separators between drawers. In action, the bottom edges of the side rails slide along pieces "g" and are guided by pieces "p." Pieces "m" also serve as guides and fit into slots as shown at "b" in picture D along the full lengths of drawer bottoms. Pieces "n" prevent the front ends of drawers from tipping down when pulled out.

When drawers stick, take them out, and place a straight edge along the rails as indicated by dash lines "x-x" and "y-y" in picture A.) If the rails are twisted or swelled out of true as shown by the straight-edge, sand down high spots and apply paraffin.

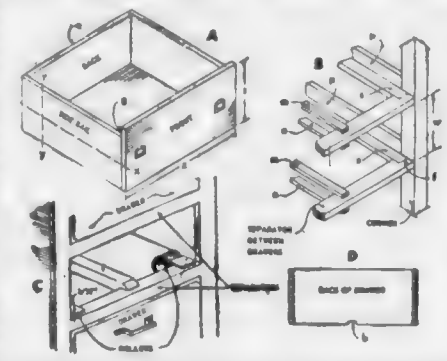
Look at the top of rear panel at "e" in picture A to see if piece "n" rubs. If it does, sand the edge "e" and apply paraffin. Check slot "b" to see if it binds on piece "m." If necessary, sand the top and sides of piece "m" and paraffin. Sand slot "b" to make it wider and deeper.

Check to see if dimension "t" in picture A is too large to fit easily in dimension "w" in picture B. If it is, sand at "f" and apply paraffin.

If the drawer will not close easily, check dimension "z" to see if it is too wide for its opening. If necessary, sand both edges at "g." See if pieces "m" and "n" are nailed and glued securely. Apply paraffin to them.

Try each of the foregoing remedies at a time until the drawer works easily. Make frequent tests when sanding to see when the binding will be relieved.

Illustration C shows a drawer often used for storing tools or other heavy materials. These drawers can be opened and closed more easily if rollers are added as shown. "Rolleze" rollers for drawers are available at hardware stores, fit along inside corners of the separators, and are held by small nails.



QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. Our red brick fireplace has become colored by smoke. Can the stains be removed?

A. Try a 15 per cent solution of oxalic acid. Keep it away from hands and clothing. Apply several times if necessary and rinse with clear water.

Q. Rubber pads on our chairs made spots on an oak floor. Can they be removed?

A. Use warm water, soap and steel wool just enough to remove the spots, then rewax the floor.

Many Seek Extra Work; Prospects Bad

Many Victoria women have been seeking part-time or full-time jobs, but the pre-Christmas demand for sales clerks has been poor.

"During the week, a large number of applications for Christmas work from persons not normally in the labor market combined with further layoffs due to the extremely wet weather to create a sudden increase in the number of persons seeking employment," National Employment Service manager C. A. Mudge reported.

Despite the upsurge, Mr. Mudge said, the number of unemployed men is quite close to last year's figure.

"The number of vacancies for women has been reduced, so that the prospects of a high proportion of them are not good," he said.

"The demand for well-qualified stenographers has increased and the need for domestic workers remains high. Factory work has been particularly scarce."

Men's employment opportunities have decreased slightly, but there is a fair demand for various tradesmen and some vacancies for salesmen, draftsmen and some mechanics.

River Beacons Reported Out

Beacons Nos. 2 and 3 in the Courtenay River have gone out and will be replaced as soon as possible, Col. Keith Dixon, district marine agent, said yesterday.

Princess Alice Suddenly Ill

Works in Any Weather

New-Type Sextant Doesn't Need Sun

BY THOMAS R. HENRY
Science Editor, NANA

WASHINGTON — Develop[illegible] a "[illegible]" [illegible] sun [illegible] works in any weather, [illegible] has been reported by the office of naval research.

The new [illegible] old navigation system represented the first practical application in a man-made gadget of the new science of radio astronomy. The naval research agency indicated that "radiometric" sextants may eventually outmode all navigational equipment now in use.

Consisting of a directional antenna and sensitive receiving equipment, the sextant picks up and handles automatically the continuous radio-wave emissions of the two heavenly bodies. This "noise energy" researchers explained, remains constant at certain wavelengths even when conditions on the sun's surface are causing enormously increased radio waves to be hurled through space.

"The sextant," the naval research reported, "is of simple construction . . . is easily and quickly operated . . . and is not likely to be disturbed by man or man-made static. Its accuracy is comparable to that of an optical sextant . . .

"The navy has been conducting tests on use of the sextant for navigation of surface ships. It has operated successfully under all weather conditions."

Eventually the naval research office said it hopes to devise a sextant which could be used to track on stars whose radio signals are much weaker than sun and moon.

"Such equipment could replace all current navigational equipment," the office said. "It is not subject to jamming as are navigational systems dependent on man-made radiations."

Fire Destroys Istanbul Market

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Fire gutted Istanbul's famous covered bazaar yesterday destroying thousands of small shops. Damage was estimated at nearly $[illegible]. The [illegible] market [illegible] centre for everything from electrical appliances to antiques was one of the city's chief tourist attractions. All the shops were burned out except those in sections where jewelry, carpets and second-hand clothing were sold.

U.S. Business Men Optimistic on West

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—The robust economic health of the western states, born of the spectacular surge of western population, can't help but continue indefinitely, a group of top business leaders predicted today.

Four questions were asked the business men by United Press:

1. How do you regard the immediate prospects for western business in general?

2. How do you regard the immediate prospects for western business in your industry?

3. What steps should be taken to insure general prosperity and employment?

4. What will be the first warning bell to listen for, if trouble threatens?

SHOULD BE GOOD

Predicted upon population and industrial growth, business in the west is bound to reflect such a trend," said Pomeroy, "with more and more national concerns coming to the west, business in our industry should be good."

Bailey said he was "highly optimistic" of business in the entire West, and especially California. He said that business of the Almond Growers' Exchange was better than last year.

Verdier pointed out that the increase of population in the West since the war had helped business. The veteran San Francisco merchant said the increase in population should continue and with more work for all, prosperity for the Western states is assured.

"Of our industry, the markets not only in Los Angeles and San Francisco but in Oregon and Washington should improve," Verdier said. "We should endeavor to obtain a permanenet peace between the union organizations and industry.

Business generally throughout the nation is in an era of expanding economy, but Western business is a step ahead of the national trend because of the rapid post-war industrialization of the Pacific Coast tier of states and the marked shift of population into this area," Killion reported.

J. R. Knowland said every indication points to conditions that are very good in the newspaper business in the West.

Mardikian said the future of the restaurant business depends on the trend of all other types of business.

Odell, who said the hotel industry outlook in the West was "excellent," said that the Christmas trade undoubtedly will exceed last year's figures and that the prospects for the future are good as demonstrated by present large sales volume of new cars, as well as other influencing factors.

Killion said new markets, with the exception of Red China, were looming in the Far East. West Coast shipping is experiencing new high demands for cargo and passenger space, he said. To meet this demand, according to Killion, three large San Francisco steamship companies recently announced plans for acquiring and building new ships costing in excess of $100,000,000.

NICE PLACE TO LIVE

Sevier predicted continued good business for the west because "more and more people and industries are discovering the west is a nice place to live and work."

The Matson president reported that his company looked forward to a continued high level of activity in passenger and freight service between Hawaii and the United States. He also predicted that the tourist business would continue to fill the Hawaiian hotels.

Russell pointed out that the eight states served by the Southern Pacific have grown 50 per cent in population since 1940. He predicted a 23 per cent growth in the same territory by 1960 over 1950.

Drinkwater, president of Western Air Lines, said the rapidly expanding population in the West was a challenge to transportation. He said he expected traffic in 1955 to surpass that of 1954.

DISCRETIONARY CONTROLS

"There should be a continuance of flexible application of the discretionary economic controls which have been set up by government to minimize radical economic swings should they appear," Banker Le Masters said in answer to the question.

Most of those queried said they believed each industry would probably find its own "warning bell" in event of threatened economic trouble.

War, or serious trouble in the Orient, could scramble the whole picture it was agreed by most of the men questioned.

New CNR Posting

J. R. BROWN

Assistant foreign freight agent for Canadian National Railways at Montreal since 1949, Mr. Brown has been appointed general freight agent at Vancouver. He succeeds W. A. Whyte, who retires on November 30 after 43 years' service.

Stockpile Copper Eases Pinch

NEW YORK (AP) The U.S. government has turned over 32,692 tons of copper to fabricators to ease the shortage following this fall's strikes at copper mines and smelters, it was announced during the week.

The office of defense mobilization also said it has authorized postponement of delivery of 2,600 tons of Canadian copper to the U.S. stockpile. This was done to help relieve Canada's shortage of the metal. The shipments will be made up by next June 30.

Reports on the lead market varied. Some producers said volume was good while others found things quiet. London prices declined moderately.

Nickel was raised 4½ cents (U.S.) a pound to 64½ cents by International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. The company said production costs have continued to increase.

Tin—91 cents a pound, New York.

FINANCING APPROVED

Authority has been granted Jackson Basin Mining Co. Ltd. to issue 200,000 fully-paid shares to Amaco Securities at five cents a share net to the company, and to option further 150,000 shares to Amaco at five cents on or before December 31, 1954.

Bank Shares Reflect Canada's Growth

BY HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

"Few classes of shares available to Canadian or other investors have reflected the changes in the development of the Canadian economy more closely than the shares of Canadian chartered banks," says A. E. Ames and Co. Ltd. in a new booklet on Canadian banks.

It points out that Canadians own about two-thirds of the bank shares and that there are 68,397 stockholders.

The stability of the earning power of Canadian banks is also noted by the long unbroken records held by the banks of dividend payments.

The banks and their consecutive years of dividend payments are: Bank of Montreal (126 years); Bank of Nova Scotia (122 years); Bank of Toronto (98 years); Canadian Bank of Commerce (87 years); Royal Bank of Canada (85 years); Dominion Bank (84 years); Imperial Bank (79 years); Banque Canadienne (65 years), and Banque Provinciale (54 years).

BIG YEAR FOR METALS

Last year's record $1,330,000,000 of mineral output will be broken in 1954, according to the annual review of the Northern Miner. The figure will be larger again next year, the paper forecasts.

Annual value of the mining industry has doubled in the last 10 years, and this year the production of nickel, copper, lead and zinc was larger than Canada's entire mineral output of 1939.

Many mines are expanding and many new camps are developing. Highlights of 1954 have included the start of production by Iron Ore Company of Canada in Labrador-Quebec, by Sherritt Gordon from its Lynn Lake mine and by three new asbestos mills in Quebec. Expansion has been reported by International Nickel, Falconbridge and Steep Rock. New mines to reach the production stage include Opemiska Copper, Quebec Copper and Keymet, while Bethlehem Mines is scheduled to be in operation by year-end.

Perhaps the most significant news of 1954, however, has come from the new prospects. There have been major developments in New Brunswick. In Ontario new mines are in the making in the Blind River and Bancroft uranium areas, and the Manitouwadge copper-zinc camp, while work has started to bring another mine into production on the Steep Rock iron range. In Saskatchewan the Beaverlodge uranium camp continues to grow in potential. In the Northwest Territories (one of the few sections to show higher gold production) a major lead-zinc camp is taking shape at Pine Point. British Columbia has a potential copper mine of substantial dimensions.

COPPER STILL SCARCE

Copper continues to be one of the base metals in firm demand. The Copper Institute announces that stocks are at a record low level and that producers had to make heavy withdrawals from their inventories to meet October demands.

TO PUZZLE ANALYSTS

For those who are trying to analyze the United States economy some strongly conflicting statistics are available.

From a year ago the bank clearances in 24 U.S. cities are down 9.5 per cent while the market price of industrial stocks has advanced 36.8 per cent.

Production of steel ingots has slumped by 7.9 per cent, but use of electrical power has advanced 8.7 per cent.

Small businesses are notably having a rough time with business failures mounting by 46.5 per cent from a year ago.

PULPMEN INVADE UBC

Forestry and engineering students at UBC this winter are receiving a nine-lecture course on the pulp and paper manufacturing industry. These deal with all aspects of the industry.

Experts giving the lectures are E. C. Cooley of Elk Falls; Leander Manley, secretary-manager of the western division, Canadian Pulp and Paper Association; R. Homewood, Alaska Pine and Cellulose Ltd.; M. F. Smith, Sidney Roofing and Paper; E. W. Campbell, Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd.; W. C. R. Jones, Columbia Cellulose; H. J. Hodgins, consulting forester; D. B. Loyd, MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd., and Ralph Patterson, Powell River Company.

TOUGH NEW PRODUCT

A new plastic film with a tensile strength about one-third that of machine steel is being introduced from the U.S. by du Pont of Canada.

Fears that the St. Lawrence Seaway will have an adverse effect on the steel and coal industry of Nova Scotia were expressed at Halifax last week by Premier Henry Hicks.

AN INVESTMENT OF $25 per month in Trans Canada Shares

From July 1st 1933 to Oct. 1st 1954 with dividends re-invested would have amounted to $19,234

A New Approach to Co-operative Investing
ALL-CANADIAN FUNDS

All-Canadian Dividend Fund
Designed specifically for the investor interested in income as well as growth of capital.
Dividends payable January, April, July and October 15th.

All-Canadian Compound Fund
Dividends automatically reinvested without charge.

The investments of the All-Canadian Funds will normally be confined to about 20 high-grade common stocks which offer the best potential. This portfolio will be changed as various eligible stocks enter a selling or buying range. Thus the funds are compact, flexible and able to profit from today's selective market conditions to give the investor growth of capital.

These new mutual funds have identical underlying investments but are adapted for two different investment purposes.

For a descriptive brochure explaining in further detail how you can participate in the growth of Canadian industry through either of the All-Canadian Funds—

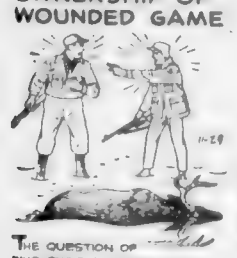
SPORTSMAN'S DIGEST by Hal Sharp

OWNERSHIP OF WOUNDED GAME



THE QUESTION OF WHO OWNS A TROPHY THAT IS WOUNDED BY ONE HUNTER AND FINISHED BY ANOTHER, IS USUALLY SETTLED THIS WAY BY THE COURTS.

WILD GAME IS PUBLIC PROPERTY UNTIL A HUNTER WOUNDS IT. THEN IT BECOMES HIS RESPONSIBILITY TO FOLLOW AND KILL IF HE QUITS THE CHASE, HE FORFEITS HIS CLAIM.

DON'T QUOTE THIS AS LEGAL ADVICE! AND, DON'T DEFEND A CLAIM WITH YOUR LIFE, EITHER!

Navy's spirited Middies, skippered by pitchin' George Welsh, mauled favored Army 27-20, Saturday to their annual service classic and sailed right into a Sugar Bowl berth opposite Mississippi.

Welsh threw three touchdown passes and accounted for Navy's fourth score himself in an eye-opening performance witnessed by 102,000 fans at Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium and countless television viewers around the nation.

CLINCHED CROWN

Mississippi earned its bid to the New Years Day extravaganza at New Orleans by clinching the Southeastern Conference championship with a 14-0 victory over arch-rival Mississippi State.

Notre Dame had to come from behind three times before turning back Rose Bowl-bound Southern California 24-14. Arkansas warmed up for the Cotton Bowl by posting a 19-0 victory over Houston and Oklahoma downed Oklahoma A & M. 14-0 for its 19th straight victory in other top games on the Big Eight football front.

DUKE WINS AGAIN

Duke closed out its Atlantic Coast Conference campaign undefeated and untied by hammering South Carolina 47-12 and are expected to be named today as the ACC's representative in the Orange Bowl.

Rice blasted Baylor, 20-14, and may have clinched a bid to the 'Gator Bowl. Wichita will probably be the other 'Gator Bowl team.

Yankees Finish Player Deal With Orioles

NEW YORK (UP)—The New York Yankees will complete their "million dollar deal" with Baltimore by obtaining first baseman Dick Kryhoski and pitcher Ray Murray, pitcher Mike Fornieles plus another player within the next few days, it was learned yesterday.

In exchange for the four Oriole players the Yankees will turn over three of their farm hands, pitcher Bill Miller and infielders Kal Segrist and Don Leppert.

Formal announcement of the transaction which actually is a "shuffle" to the nine-player deal made between the two clubs November 18 will be made as soon as the Orioles can get waivers on the four players they are sending to the Yankees.

Fornieles, Murray and Bill Miller are the fourth player who probably will be an outfielder are slated to be sent to Yankee farm clubs or else used in a deal with another major league club.

Aussie Total at 503 As Second Day Ends

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—Australian batsmen Arthur Morris and Ned Harvey, both left-handers, scored centuries Saturday in the second day of the first cricket test in a series of five against England. At close of play Australia had lost six wickets for 503 runs in their first innings.

Morris and Harvey batted magnificently in a partnership of 202 runs.

HAMMERS BOWLING

Graeme Hole hammered the English bowling but after he was put out for 57 Australian scoring slumped.

Further bad news for England came in the latest rundown of form that Denis Compton the top leading batsmen may be out for two months with a hand injured in the 4th day's play.

Morris looked cool and drove.

Morris hooked and cut and drove with style to register TWO sixes and 18 fours during his marathon stand of six hours 20 minutes.

NARROW ESCAPES

Harvey showed patches of brilliant form but although he had two narrow escapes, scoring with crisp cover drives and neat leg glances, he reached his best batting in the later stages of his innings. Harvey took two hours 23 minutes for his 50 but added the remaining 112 runs in 126 minutes. His 162 the highest score in a test against England contained a five and 17 fours.

England's bowlers stood up to the punishment. Brian Statham took two for 91 in 30 overs. Alec Bedser finished with one wicket for 131 and Trevor Bailey had a spell of six overs for 31 including the valuable Morris wicket. Frank Tyson bowled 24 overs for 130 runs.

Native Dancer Named 'Horse of the Year'

NEW YORK (AP)—Native Dancer, Alfred Vanderbilt's grey ghost of Sagamore who was retired in August because of a foot injury, was voted "Horse of the Year" Friday in the 19th annual poll of Triangle Publications racing experts.

The four-year-old Dancer received 19 of the 31 ballots cast by the Morning Telegraph and Daily Racing Form experts. Closest competition came from the king Ranches High Gun with 10 votes. Andy Crevolin's Determine got two votes. Will Rogers Jr.'s Heliscope got one.

High Gun owned by Robert J. Kleberg of Texas was the overwhelming choice as three-year-old champion with 28 votes. Kentucky Derby winner Determine and fourth and Preakness winner Hasseyampa had spots as Horse of the Year.

The two-year-old champion ship went to the Belair Stud Nashua by a 294 ballot count Mrs. Russell A. Firestone's Summer Tan.

The Dancer's big victory was his sensational come from behind rundown of Straight Face in the Metropolitan Handicap.

(From C.P. and Reuters Reports)

LONDON—The forgotten underdogs of British soccer took advantage of hog-wallow playing conditions Saturday to score a series of upsets in the weekend English Football League Competition which found not one of the top six teams as the first division leg listening a victory.

Heavy rains for the past two days had turned the football fields into seas of mud.

League champion Wolverhampton was held to a surprise 1-1 tie by Arsenal in a feature match on Lonsdons Highbury Stadium ground. Nevertheless, Wolverhampton succeeded in taking a three point lead at the head of the first division standings when their three nearest challengers all suffering defeat.

ROUGHER GOING

second place Sunderland which had battled to three successive ties, found the going a little rougher against Preston and took a 3-1 trimming while Manchester United suffered its third defeat of the campaign at West Bromwich, which scored a 2-0 triumph.

Lower placed Tottenham scored one of the most resounding upsets when it edged Burnley on its home grounds, 2-1. Portsmouth which has had a rollercoaster run of luck finally suffered a losing reverse when Chelsea scored a scant 1-1 triumph.

Blackburn Rovers second division leaders lost 7-1 at Luton. Inside right Gordon Turner got three of Luton's goals.

ORIENT MOVES UP

Leyton Orient moved up to second place in the third division's southern section by pouncing Southend United 5-1. Section leaders Bristol City drew 1-1 with Queens Park Rangers at home.

Southorpe United kept a firm grip on the northern section lead by winning 2-1 against Chesterfield. Other headliners Mansfield Town were down 2-0 to Hartlepools United.

Leaders of Scottish League sections A and B, Aberdeen and Motherwell, further entrenched themselves on top with victories today.

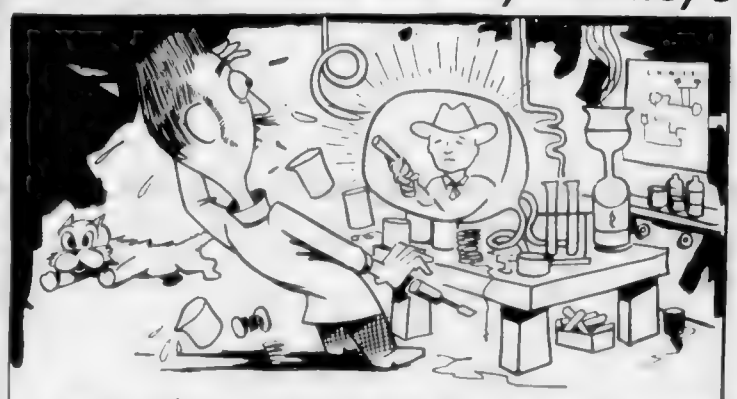
DID YOU KNOW? By Heaney's



Nearly eighty years ago men were talking about Television and doing something about it. In 1877 a Frenchman named Senlecq, produced a device which transmitted simple pictures by electricity. This method was actually put to use before the end of the 19th. century producing animation on a store sign - a marvel and a mystery of the day.

Another early Television inventor was Nipkow a German who devised the scanning disc which until very recently was the means used to "break up" the picture being transmitted. The Cathode ray tube an indispensable part of modern television was first made fifty years ago. The first practical Television is credited to John H. Baird a British inventor who conducted a successful demonstration in 1926.

Eskimo Supporters Whoop It Up

Toronto, upset Friday night when Edmonton Eskimo supporters held their night-before Grey Cup celebration was really in a turmoil last night as the overjoyed westerners really went to town to celebrate upset victory of their club in Grey Cup final. Banner carried around before game proved more prophetic than experts expected.

Parker Goes 85 Yards with Fumble To Win Grey Cup for Edmonton Club

Esks Score 26-25 With Great Rally

BY WILF GRUSON

TORONTO (CP) — A spectacular 85-yard run touchdown by halfback Jackie Parker with three minute to play brought Edmonton Eskimos from the brink of defeat and set them an upset victory over Montreal Alouettes Friday saturday the West greatest west Grey Cup victory.

The underdog Eskimos came from behind to score the stunning upset and bring the Grey Cup back to the West for the first time since 1948. It was the fifth time in the 22 games between the Eastern and Western football champions that the West won the trophy.

STRAY LATERAL

Parker an All-American with Mississippi State last season, was the hero of the Esks' amazing victory. Chuck Hunsinger, six-foot 190-pound half from Chicago Bears turned out to be goat when he turned a still East offensive showing with a play in the dying minutes of the game that enabled Parker to score the winning touchdown.

A crowd of 27,321 went wild as the Eskimos sped into the lead for the third time when Parker picked up a wild lateral by Hunsinger at the Edmonton 25-yard line and broke into the clear to scamper for his touchdown.

It wiped out a 25-20 lead that the Als had taken on a great uphill battle after being down 14-6 at one stage in the second quarter.

It was a heart breaking defeat for the Als who on their rating as probably the best team ever developed in the East went into the game as heavy favorites. They were quoted as a 5-to-1 odds-on choice or even money on a 13-point spread.

The Als nearly pulled the game out of the fire in the last minutes. They roared down the field into Eskimo territory, [illegible] attempt to get in [illegible] the Eskimo [illegible] Grey Cup victory.

FUMBLE ENDS THREAT

Victoria football fans who missed yesterday's spine-tingling Grey Cup final on television will be able to see it over CBUT, channel 2, this afternoon at 2.

CBUT will re-telecast the game direct from Toronto's Varsity Stadium where 27,000 spectators watched Edmonton Eskimos pull out a 26-25 victory on the strength of a touchdown in the final two minutes of the fourth quarter.

a pass. Bill Briggs, former Toronto Argonaut player, [illegible] on the loose ball to stop the Als last threatening gesture.

The victory was the first for an Edmonton team in four Grey Cup appearances. They lost previously in 1921, 1922 and 1942.

The last Western team to win the title was Calgary Stampeders in 1948. The Stamps upset Ottawa Rough Riders 12-7. Previous to that Winnipeg had won it three times starting with their memorable 1812 triumph over Hamilton Tigers in 1935. The Blue Bombers defeated Ottawa in 1939 and again in 1941.

In the latest East-West clash the Als overcame a shaky first quarter to take an 18-14 lead at half time. They were down 11-6 at the end of the first quarter and fans in the second session the Eskimos increased their margin to 14-11 on a field goal by Bob Dean.

But before the half ended the Alouettes struck for two converted touchdowns behind the brilliant passing of Etcheverry, their all-star quarter from the University of Denver.

The Alouettes were held to only a point in the third quarter but early in the fourth quarter they counted another converted touchdown to go ahead 25-14. It was then that the Eskimos scored two converted majors that wiped out the Als impressive lead.

LONG MARCHES

Rollie Miles, Edmonton's brilliant Negro half tossed a pass to Earl Lindley for the Esks' first touchdown that topped off a 77-yard march. Quarterback Bernie Faloney, who directed the Esks' crowd pleasing split-T attack with its smashing success crashed over for their second touchdown from the one-yard line. It finished off an 86-yard drive.

Halfback Cleo Lappman from Texas A & M dashed through a big hole in the Montreal line from 11 yards out to get the Esks' third touchdown. The convert and Montreal's lead to 25-20 and four minutes later the Esks went ahead on Parker's spectacular touchdown run.

Jackie Rob Dean converted three of the four Edmonton touchdowns and booted a 37-yard field goal. Eskimos failed in a try to run for the extra point on their major score.

Etcheverry tossed three touchdown passes, two to O'Quinn and another to flying wing Joey Pal. Hunsinger got Montreal's other major on a seven-yard dash around the end. Ray Poole converted all four touchdowns and kicked single when a field goal attempt was wide.

O'Quinn's first touchdown came when he took a short pass and broke into the clear to run 90-yards to score. He made a jumping catch on the goal line to [illegible] a 10-yard drive for his second major. Hunsinger's major came after the Als swept 80-yard [illegible] on Etcheverry's passing. GREAT RECORD

[illegible] made 21 for a total of 370 yards, a record yardage figure in the classic. Indian Jack Jacobs of Winnipeg Blue Bombers set the mark of 326 in the last cup final. Parker and Faloney [illegible] passes and completed 10 for 169 yards.

Lappman made 2 first [illegible] as against Montreal's 37. It was just about even on the ground. The Esks registered 351 yards against 328 for Als.

Blockade Of China Proposed

WASHINGTON (CP) — Senate Republican leader William F. Knowland proposed Saturday that the United States blockade the China coast, short of bombing, to force Red China to release all Americans held prisoner there.

Knowland told reporters he believes such a naval blockade would get results without a grave risk of war.

The California senator said the people should be told the truth, how to cope with the problem of foreign relations, instead of the present censure of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

"I think decisive steps must be taken now in the next few weeks, before the people, more than in the past, give more time to the problems of the country than to the dignity of the senate," Knowland told reporters.

He said he would hope other countries would support a blockade of Red China but that he would favor it with or without the support of the United Nations "if the American citizens are not released."

Kaiser Project Bad for B.C., Says Gregory

NANAIMO—Victoria MLA George Gregory said here the proposed Kaiser Dam deal would enable a rival to manufacture aluminum at a lower cost than British Columbia producers.

Speaking at a Liberal rally he said whether the Peace River W A C Bennett Dam or the Mackenzie River project went ahead first the power would cost $20 a horsepower with a second, if approved, Bennett Lake-Mesa-Kemano-Kitimat scheme. Each of these projects had been studied and the cost would be $25.00 a horsepower, a report of Stevenson and Mr. Gregory.

He described the dam which Kaiser says is the most possible.

Mr. Gregory pointed to premier Bennett's contention that federal government policy was one of forcing trade and that should have the right to export power from foreign sales.

The whole government said Mr. Gregory supported in the export of power.

"If we have surplus power we should be able to sell it to the States for development purposes. I don't believe that there is not enough [illegible]," he concluded.

Wasted Land

I have read with great interest your report on the extensive survey made by Mr. J. W. Wilson on the expected future growth of Greater Victoria and adjacent areas, together with the planning advocated.

It is to be hoped that such recommendations will be properly dealt with.

It would also seem that a competent survey should be made to cover the total areas of the settled parts of Vancouver Island especially as it concerns agriculture although Mr. Wilson made some sound recommendations concerning the utilization of land near Victoria.

If town planning can receive sections for such purposes as industrial concerns it could also surely be of even greater importance to allot certain fertile land for such crops as dairy farming, truck gardening, etc., with less production areas for residential purposes.

Already a considerable amount of good cleared land is wasted due to spotty settlement breaking into fields and leaving small sections that are not economic to utilize.

The import of food products to Vancouver Island is very large now and looking to the future it would be desirable to at least maintain as much fertile land as possible for agricultural use.

To Reimburse SPCA

Let us hope that there will be a generous response to the appeal being launched to reimburse the SPCA for the cost of ammunition used to get the afflicted oil-soaked birds out of their misery.

The distress caused by the birds' plight is clear evidence that Victorians are animal lovers and it was gratifying to note how the children endeavoured to help.

It is not so evident that all Victorians are aware of the fact that the SPCA is not subsidized in any way being solely dependent on the generosity of citizens.

Let us hope that not only individual citizens will respond to the appeal but that the municipalities will make a generous grant to help maintain this essential service to which we one and all immediately turn in such emergency.

Washing Birds

Why destroy so many water birds covered with oil when washing them in eucalyptus oil would take the grime and grease from their bodies and feathers without injury to the birds?

Never wash birds covered with oil in detergent as it takes three weeks for them to recover their natural body oil if this is done.

Is Victoria Expendable?

UNLESS this area has been written off by the national defense department as expendable it is not easy to appreciate the virtue of sending the reserve army's anti-aircraft guns after the obsolete Albert Head guns. Victoria needs them as much as does NATO. If it does not then normal concepts of modern defense must go by the board.

Lacking a sizeable fighter-plane force, and there is small evidence that even the Comox station will ever be amply supplied with such aircraft, there must be anti-aircraft guns if defensive measures are to be a reality. Even with aircraft in abundance these guns have a valuable role to play. It is true there are 20 anti-aircraft weapons of the regular army at Work Point, but since these are used for training purposes and are likely on any hostilities to be shifted to the division to which the batteries belong — the regular army being a widely scattered organization in peace time—not much comfort is to be derived from their presence.

One is not privy to high-level defense planning but, putting it at its mildest, it seems anomalous to organize a new reserve artillery formation for this area, take away its anti-aircraft guns, and substitute instead medium-type armament capable of coping only with small surface craft or land objects. It is as though aerial warfare had never been heard of. One would never guess from this redeployment of defensive power that a valuable graving dock was in this area, together with fixed naval installations that certainly owed protection. One wonders also what the navy thinks of the new arrangement, it being without a carrier on this coast and thus without its own aircraft umbrella.

Agronomy Pays Off

THE publication of the third progress report of the Dominion Experimental Station at Saanichton, for the period 1947-53, serves to draw attention to one of the most useful federal services in this area. Since its inception, and its first report in 1932, the Bazan Bay station has carried the science of agronomy into practical application on Saanich acres, where there are unusual conditions of dry-soil tillage and need for the conservation of soil moisture. Not the least important phase of the current progress report are the results of mulch tests under every conceivable condition. To growers in the area such experimentation has proved invaluable.

The Saanichton Experimental Station has long been a prized asset on Vancouver Island, from its inception under the late Dr. E. M. Straight up to the present, when Mr. J. J. Woods, BSA, MSA, is the superintendent in charge. A small staff of agronomists with plant pathological and other research assistance has carried out a wide range of practical tests under control conditions in Saanich acres. The result through the years has been directly tributary to the benefits received by Island growers in flower, seed, fruit, vegetable and other special divisions. Large sums have been saved for growers by the detection and eradication of plant and other diseases. Soil productivity under varying conditions has always been a main inquiry at Bazan Bay, as the current mulching tests bear witness.

This is research at its practical level. Such findings as noted in the 1947-53 report, with careful documentation and illustration, become the indices and guidance to future planting and these results are closely followed by those who make their living off the land. Not a small part of the success that has been established on the Saanich Peninsula and elsewhere in highly specialized forms of horticulture and agriculture is due to the test runs made first at the Bazan Bay station under field conditions. This is agronomy in action, and it is paying off.

Hope Turns into Victory

IN the ceaseless war against crippling and wasting diseases few battles have attained more heartening success than that against tuberculosis. Latest statistics show that the incidence of tuberculosis and its death rate are declining with a rapidify which would have seemed almost incredible ten or even five years ago. Among the Indians of British Columbia, where the disease used to be much more difficult to combat, the story is the same; since 1946 the annual death rate has decreased from 203 to only 11 this year.

These splendid results have been achieved through education, leading to early diagnosis which in turn is accompanied by improved treatment assuring a cure in all but a very small proportion of cases. Needless to say the cost of the campaign has been heavy, and one of the most heart-warming features of it is that the money has been provided mainly by voluntary contributions through the use of Christmas Seals. The idea of using these stamps to carry the message of hope was conceived by a Copenhagen postmaster just 50 years ago and today it has world-wide acceptance.

In Canada it is now possible to foresee with certainty the day when tuberculosis will be relegated to the list of minor ailments instead of being the dreaded scourge that other generations have known it as. That day is not yet, however, and it can be reached only through continued use of the Christmas Seal symbols of a hope that is drawing closer every year to complete victory. In this the 50th anniversary of Christmas Seals there is special encouragement to use them lavishly.

Island Editors Say

Ferry Service

Islanders and residents of the Peninsula alike were hoping that the CPR would continue to run night boats between Vancouver and Victoria but announce a plan for a fast day service linking Vancouver with the northern end of the Peninsula. On a year-around basis, this would appear to be a service which could prove highly profitable.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce is on its toes. It has now had a frank discussion with the CPR on boat service to B.C.'s capital. It is perhaps our turn now. The Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce might be well advised to invite the CPR officials over here for a similar discussion. The company should make a clear-cut statement on its plans for a service to Sidney in 1955. If the CPR does not do it perhaps some other transportation company will.

Not Sport

Courtenay and District Fish and Game Association . . . calls for legalizing the use of salmon roe in steelhead fishing.

It is a proven fact that use of salmon roe in steelhead fishing removes every vestige of "sport" from this type of angling. A fellow who has never held a fishing rod in his hands before can surely catch one of these fighting fish simply by smearing his hook with salmon roe, since the smell, appearance and other characteristics of roe are a sure fire lure.

More Candidates

Increased taxable value of homes in this district under the equalization of assessment next year is going to mean that more people will be available to run for public office.

With a higher assessment the difference between the investment and the mortgage will be reduced.

There are men in the area who would willingly seek office but a look at their investments, mortgages and assessed values shows them that under the present assessment rate it will be many years before they can offer their services.

But next year we should see changes and there may be more men willing to seek public office. This will be welcomed.

Forest Licenses

The Duncan Chamber of Commerce's hesitancy about forest management licenses undoubtedly reflects an attitude discernible in both public and private groups. Costs and risks cannot be computed accurately; the system is too young. If the importance of conservation is kept uppermost, it is likely that the system will be successful both to the licensee and the public generally.

Street Names

The subject of changing the street names in Glenwood area has again been brought to the fore and will, no doubt, result in action being taken.

From one point of view, the old army names have value and we think that it would be a shame if in years to come there was nothing left to remind residents that they are living on the site of a Second World War military camp.

Amalgamation

The Chronicle still feels that the question of amalgamation is one of the most important questions facing Ladysmith and the adjoining areas, and we still hope, as we did four months ago, that persons interested in the question will make their views known. It has been our hope all along that the columns of this paper would be used as a public forum in which arguments for and against amalgamation would be presented for everyone to see so that any misstatements of fact could be challenged, misunderstandings clarified and misrepresentations quashed.

So far, no one has taken advantage of the offer made four months ago. Not a single letter has been written either for or against amalgamation. But the offer still stands.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

A FAMOUS author once said that the man who smokes thinks like a sage and acts like a Samaritan, but I am loath to accept that theory; the other day I was not at all sage-like and I was most uncertain how to act.

Had I been wise I would not have lit the particular cigarette in the first place.

You must know that I was at a certain weekly luncheon at which it is customary to open the proceedings with "O Canada." Much has been said about the over-playing of this anthem and some of it in this column, but that is not the point of debate today. Enough that the anthem is sung at the beginning of every such meeting.

Now it is also the habit of men, being smokers, or rather of those of them who are addicted to tobacco for of course there are some stalwarts with the will to eschew such superficial aid to thought and sagacity to smoke as they approach their seats or immediately upon sitting down thereat.

This is the informal period which precedes the meeting. There is nothing infra dig or less majeste about puffing heartily at a cigarette during this interval, or, for those who strangely enough prefer it, a cigar. Pipes only, it appears, are bad form.

When the president raps for order and the piano strikes the preliminary chord all those present rise dutifully, stub their cigarettes in an ashtray—what cigar smokers do with their butts is outside my realm of knowledge—and then, standing at attention give voice to the anthem.

Such is the rote but on this unlucky day I was caught napping. Before I knew it I was on my feet with others, but unlike them my cigarette was still in my hand. What should I do? That was the thought which raced through my mind as I began to sing.

No ashtray was close at hand and I did not like to disturb the atmosphere by stretching awkwardly over the table to the nearest receptacle. On the other hand it would be deplorable housekeeping to drop the lighted cigarette on the floor, and while I might have done so surreptitiously I did not think this was a pukka thing to do.

So I did nothing. That is to say I merely bent my fingers in order that the smoke, as I hoped, would curl itself unnoticed up my coat sleeve.

But my conscience was ill at ease throughout the rendering of "O Canada." I am one of those individuals who believes that while this and the national anthem may suffer from too frequent repetition when either is played it deserves a degree of reverent attention. It is not sufficient to mouth the words while thinking of something else; one should endeavor to enter into the spirit of the anthem or keep altogether silent.

This consideration in fact is what transcends both the words and the tune of either "O Canada" or "The Queen," occasionally decried as lacking in artistic merit as though this mattered a jot. It is the response of the heart to these anthems that counts; if one has no affinity for the sentiments they express one had better sit still and openly proclaim dissent.

I could not live up to my creed on this occasion. Half my mind was with the smoke filling my sleeve to the elbow, and that meant of course that "O Canada" received only perfunctory obeisance. And that displeased me.

I doubt now that the famous author was correct in his diagnosis of the man who smokes.

Speeding Cars

What is really terrifying is the head-on collision between two cars both doing 30 miles per hour or higher. At 30 miles the collision force of two cars is four times that of one against a stationary object; both at 40 miles, seven times; at 50, 11 times; at 60, 16 times.

In the latter case it would be as if each car, in colliding, suddenly increased its weight from 2,000 to 16,000 pounds.

That is something to remember. A speeding car is something of a projectile.

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

THAT rain is disagreeable we all agree, but residents of Victoria should be thankful that our annual rainfall seldom exceeds 27 inches. Downtown Vancouver's average is 58 inches and even that's small compared with many up-coast points.

Henderson Lake, which is only 20 miles from Alberni, holds the B.C. record with 263 inches; Swanson Bay has 192 and Ocean Falls 162. The Henderson Lake rain gauge was kept for over 30 years by officials of a salmon hatchery there which has since been closed down. On one occasion 15½ inches fell in one 24-hour period. This is hard to believe and Ottawa queried it; but the hatchery superintendent finally convinced them that his figures were correct and they stand on the records to this day.

The tragic loss of life which resulted from streams flooding in several Up-Island areas where excessive rains occurred during the past few weeks, is to be deplored. Concern is also expressed for those families who lost their homes and at the extensive property damage caused. Neither are we unmindful of the havoc played in the recent Toronto floods, where so many lost their lives and damage ran into the millions.

In comparison with the people who live in those areas, Victorians are well off, even if an occasional basement gets flooded, a culvert blocks or someone gets caught without a raincoat. But it is surprising how so many people think the world is coming to an end when half an inch of rain falls in one day, and from every second person met in the street it's the same story. "Isn't the rain terrible." "I wonder if it is ever going to stop." "Never seen anything like it" and other time-worn exclamations, as if they had never seen it rain before.

No sooner do many of these same people see a gutter clogged up or water threatening a basement, than they phone the city engineer's office, the police or the fire department and expect to see someone sent to attend to it immediately.

Rainwater catch basins are placed at intervals along every street regardless of how frequently the street-cleaning machine goes its rounds, loose leaves blown by the wind or litter discarded by thoughtless individuals often block the gratings soon afterwards. A sizeable pool then forms, which if not cleared immediately overflows into the nearest yard or basement.

Admittedly this is the city's responsibility, but is it reasonable to expect the street-cleaning crews to be everywhere at one time? Also the rain frequently occurs at night and on Sundays. Two minutes with a shovel would sometimes free it and prevent possible damage; but how often does one find a property owner or anyone representing him, on the business-end of the shovel? The tendency is to "let George do it" and holler for help.

Rain is a natural phenomenon without which we couldn't live. People from the prairies don't like it, but that's understandable, for they are accustomed to what is commonly known as a drier climate. Actually the prairie provinces get just as much precipitation as we do, but most of it is in the form of snow. And theirs is a dry snow, whereas what little we get is usually wet and slushy.

We on the coast are accustomed to the rain and from a health standpoint it has long been established that fewer people suffer from colds when it rains than when we experience the snow and its accompanying cold spell. It has been proved that a man can survive for days when exposed to the rain; but will freeze to death in a few hours in sub-zero weather. Ten years ago Captain George Skinner was shipwrecked on the west coast and survived after lying in the wet bush without food of shelter for 22 days while it rained every day. Another time a CNR control surveyor was at Smoke Bay for 18 days and was wet when he left though it rained but every day.

The weather always being a favorite topic of conversation that is perhaps why we hear it damned so much this month. But, let's be fair to it. For by 2 o'clock in the afternoon when the sun comes out and we've forgotten all about it, we hear the very same people remark "What lovely weather we're having" "Isn't this a mild winter" and so on, as though it hadn't rained for weeks. Actually it wasn't the rain itself that bothered them, but the inconvenience of having to put on their slickers and rubbers, or carry an umbrella. Or perhaps they were caught downtown without them, got their feet wet before they reached the office, or were splashed by a passing car.

We are reminded also of other disagreeable weather conditions experienced here besides rain. The cold westerly wind is one. An unusually cold spell about January when our pipes freeze up is another; for few Victoria homes are built to withstand it. And people who build in low-lying areas which are obviously subject to flooding have only themselves to blame when their property gets under water.

By taking ordinary precautions with regard to dress, one has little to fear from the rain. It can be very exasperating at times, but after all it is a mere trifle compared to the many other ups and downs in our everyday lives.

One consolation often overlooked too, is the fact that the rain is usually accompanied by moderately warm weather.

Type in 32 Languages

TO SET type in a language not understood by the printer is a challenge to compositors that most of them would prefer to avoid.

What shall we say then of a concern that has printed books in 32 languages, with strange alphabets and language habits such as reading from right to left?

A crew of professors, you guess? Wrong! Not one of the 26 employees of the J. H. Furst Printing Co. of Baltimore speaks any language other than English. Yet the output of this 50-year-old family concern includes books in Runic, Nepalese, Sanskrit, three kinds of Syriac, Egyptian, Siamese and Coptic—to name a few.

The trick is exactness in following copy and in reading proof.

The Tiger Passes

GEORGES "Tiger" Clemenceau, wartime premier of France, died in Paris early in the morning of November 24, 1929—25 years ago.

Premier Andre Tardieu wept as he left the house where the tough old warrior died. Clemenceau, one of greatest patriots in the history of France, had taken over a nation riddled with doubt and treason, and steered it to victory.

The last words of the 88-year-old Tiger were: "My work is finished."

The clergy of Vancouver were considering the possibility of prayer to end the drought which threatened hydro-electric production on the Lower Mainland.

That new-fangled machine, the automobile, was beginning to play a part in the Russo-Japanese War. The Colonist carried this dispatch datelined Chefoo, Manchuria, 50 years ago:

"General Kuropatkin is the possessor of a new 20-horsepower automobile with which he is able to rush at high speed from one part to another of the line 25 miles long . . .

"Kruopatkin wished to secure 20 automobiles especially constructed to carry ammunition speedily in emergency cases. He will use them only in winter, when the Manchurian roads are in excellent condition.

"The Chinese now regard Kuropatkin and his machine with superstitious awe, believing the latter to be an atrociously powerful specimen of the foreign devil."

Victorians were urged in an advertisement to "take the V. and S. Railway and steamer Iroquois for Nanaimo. A delightful trip among the islands."

Winter came early to Victoria in mid-November, 95 years ago.

"For nearly a fortnight past the weather has been clear and cold, although not severe." The British Colonist reported on November 29, 1859.

"The sky almost cloudless. The ground and lakes frozen. From all appearances we may expect a change."

"The invigorating and exhilarating exercise of skating has been indulged in by many during the last few days about two miles back of town. While a party of gentlemen were enjoying themselves in this way there on Saturday, Mr. A. F. Main had the misfortune to break through the ice, and escaped only by swimming. The ice was little more than an inch thick."

The old Victoria Gazette, first newspaper published on Vancouver Island, had gone out of business, and another newspaper of the same name was to be published from the office of the New Westminster Times.

The Hudson's Bay Co. steamer Labouchere sailed from Victoria for San Francisco with some 200 gold miners who were going out for the winter.

Severe criticism was leveled at the master of the ship for refusing to let a party of stranded explorers have passage from Fort Simpson on credit. They were left without provisions depending on the good will of the Indians to keep them alive before they could get out by canoe in four months' time.

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

DOG DAYS, according to the dictionary, are those hottest days of July and August when a dog is supposed to find it hard to breathe. But if we were to ask a dog, these are really the dog days right now.

No season of the year is meaner for a dog than these weeks at the onset of winter, when mud and slush smear the ground. Dog popularity declines faster in December than at any other time of year. You can beat it into the head of a small boy not to track mud into the house.

But a dog cannot be taught seasonal manners. With a dog, manners are all or nothing. You can drill him not to jump on the chesterfield. But you can't teach him to scrape his paws.

The only way dogs can get along with Man is by the adoption of a rigid code of habits. In addition to that, dogs are creatures of habit by instinct. There is a ritualistic dignity about the way a dog goes through his routine. Every morning, when he is let out the door, he proceeds with unfailing devotion to the same trees, hydrants and fence corners. He goes and scratches the lawn on the same neighbor's property. Habit takes him on his brief rounds of the neighborhood, and habit brings him back to the door to be let in.

But now come the true dog days, and his habits are all shot to pieces. Hostile housewives adopt one of two course: either the dog is kept indoors on a muddy day until he is nearly crazy; or else, being let out, he is denied admission all day long until Dad gets home from the office to dry his paws and scrub the mud off his belly.

With the approach of the tender Christmas season, in which all his family appear to share, the dog discovers a growing acerbity in everybody's attitude to him.

It's a tough time to be a dog.

Tumultuous Welcome in 1929

City Must Have Sensed Great Churchill Future

BY JAMES K. NESBITT

Victorians, a quarter century ago, must have somehow foreseen the heights to which Winston Churchill would rise for in 1929 when he came here they gave him a welcome almost as uproarious as he would receive were he in town today.

Except for crowds in the street which would be the case today Mr. Churchill's two-day visit to Victoria in the autumn of 1929 was a triumphal procession from one event to another.

ALWAYS ON GO

Mr. Churchill wouldn't stay still one minute when he was in Victoria. He saw more in two days than most people would see in two weeks. He insisted on being on the go every waking hour. He was 55 then.

With him were his son Randolph his brother Major John Churchill and his son John. They stayed at Government House with Lieutenant-Governor R. Randolph Bruce and his chatelaine, his niece Miss Helen Mackenzie now Mrs. Hudson I. Piggott of London.

When he came ashore from the Ss. Princess Marguerite at the Belleville Street docks Lieutenant-Governor Bruce proceeded to usher his visitor first into the Government House limousine.

With a courtly bow, Mr. Churchill said: "After the King's representative," and he helped the governor into the car.

On the way to Government House, the lieutenant-governor as active as Mr. Churchill, took the visitors into the Legislative Buildings to call on Attorney-General Harry Pooley acting premier in the absence of Dr. S. F. Tolmie.

One of Mr. Bruce's favorite spots in the buildings was the archives, and so he marched Mr. Churchill up there and Archivist John Hosie showed them around, and Mr. Bruce had quite a time tearing Mr. Churchill away from the maps of this coast prepared by Captain Cook.

BIG LUNCHEON

The biggest event of Mr. Churchill's stay here was a Canadian Club luncheon at the Empress Hotel with near 800 crowded into the ballroom and adjoining tearoom and all of hanging by the rafters. The crowd cheered wave after wave and just about mobbed Mr. Churchill in an effort to shake hands.

W. H. M. Haldane, QC, club's vice-president, presided. He said: "We are privileged to welcome one of the most eminent and outstanding figures in the public life of the Empire."

Churchill started his talk by saying: "Your green lawns and sturdy oaks, and hearts as British as the oaks, all remind me of the Mother Country . . ."

He regretted that Sir Richard M. Bride was not there for he said in many ways he had had as Sir Richard as Mr. agent-general in London he had earned much of Victoria and British Columbia Sir Richard had died in London.

Excerpts from the Churchill speech of that day 25 years ago: "We are anxious that Germany should be one last place in the family circle of Europe, and that has been achieved. We have very old and highly valued associations with Japan. I have always found my confidence in the government and people of Japan strengthened by their conduct in peace and war.

Let us be of good cheer let us have confidence in the future.

WILD APPLAUSE

The Colonist said: As he brought to a close his discourse with a sweeping description of the new British Empire, Mr. Churchill carried his audience from one burst of applause to another."

Dean Cecil Quainton proposed the vote of thanks: "Mr. Churchill has given much to Canada; it is our hope that Canadians will be able to give something to him."

The editor of the Colonist, the late Charles Swayne, saw Mr. Churchill's potential greatness when he wrote:

"No living politician has had such a meteoric career as Mr. Churchill. His repeated successes are due to a dynamic personality, brilliant abilities and the forcefulness of his will power.

"His political career is only at its midway post, because he may still be regarded as in the heydey of political youth. The manifold experiences that are his would seem to mark him out as a future prime minister of Great Britain. Mr. Churchill is that rare type of man bound to succeed in any walk of life."

There were two Government House dinners for Mr. Churchill and invited were Mrs. S. F. Tolmie, General and Mrs. Noel Money, Col. Gay Andrew, Miss Laura Audain, Major and Mrs. A. Sexton Humphreys, Lady McBride, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Angus, Mrs. C. F. Armstrong, Mrs. M. F. Driscoll, Mrs. Cudemore, Miss Helen Streatfield, Mr. and Mrs. John Hart, Hon. and Mrs. R. L. Maitland, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Pattullo, B. C. Nicholas, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. King, Chief Justice and Mrs. J. A. Macdonald, Dean and Mrs. Quainton, Sir Richard and Lady Lake, Mr. and Mrs. S. Cortauld, Mr. Justice and Mrs. Archer Martin, Mr. Justice A. E. McPhillips, Hon. and Mrs. R. H. Pooley, Mrs. James Dunsmuir, Mrs. E. G. Prior, Lady Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. Alistair Forbes, Mrs. Van Horne, Miss Crease, Mr. Lindley Crease and Capt. W. Hobart Misson.

DROVE, FISHED

Mr. Churchill certainly did the rounds in Victoria. He went motoring over the Malahat. He went fishing off the breakwater with Norman A. Yarrow in his yacht Cynthia. He visited the government drydock at Esquimalt, where he was greeted by Allan Craig acting as superintendent in the absence of Capt. O. H. Parker. He was welcomed to Yarrow's by Mr. Yarrow, E. W. Izard and Digby Robinson.

He inspected Christ Church Cathedral then building. Fred Lavlitt superintendent of the job noted that since Mr. Churchill held his bricklayer's union card he might like to lay a piece of cement in the Northwest Tower the Bishop of London Tower. Mr. Churchill said yes he would, and so he shinnied up a ladder and went to work, muttering something about the cement being too stiff.

The Victoria branch, Royal Society of St. George, went calling on him at Government House to make him an honorary life member. President W. H. Langley and Vice-president Ald. John Harvey did the honors.

Churchill drove out to Hatley Park to call on Mrs. James Dunsmuir, and he paid a visit to the British Public Schools Club not the club of the same name of the present day, though in the same quarters.

He went to Beacon Hill Park and sweated a bit as he planted an English May tree in the now forgotten Mayors Grove just above the Heywood foot ball field. Lieutenant-Governor Bruce Mayor Herbert Anscomb and Ald. H. O. Litchfield watched him work and told him he'd done a good job.

TO SEATTLE

After his week-end visit Mr. Churchill and his party left for Seattle.

There he was asked what he thought of U.S. prohibition. All he would say was: "The British have a deep-rooted prejudice against compulsion. British drinking is diminishing from champagne down to beer."

Once before, in 1899, Mr. Churchill, just back from the Boer War, visited Canada but did not come west. During the Second World War he made a number of trips to Ottawa but the 1929 visit was his first and last trip to Victoria.

Birthday Given World Attention

Indicative of the world-wide attention being paid to Sir Winston Churchill on his 80th birthday, Tuesday, is the fact that at least two major U.S. magazines have devoted lengthy articles to him in December issues.

Collier's of December 10 carries a life story of Churchill on nine full pages by British correspondent Alan Moorehead. Included is a page of photographs.

The Ladies' Home Journal in its December issue carries a five-page article by Inspector Walter H. Thompson of Scotland Yard, Churchill's bodyguard for 20 years, telling about events he witnessed while keeping up with Sir Winston."

Wants Absentee Votes on By-Law

Leader Hits PTA Inaction

Personal reasons for resigning as president of McKenzie Avenue PTA were given yesterday by Mrs. E. E. Knight who at the same time she resigned the provincial parent-teacher council for action on the question of absentee voting.

Mrs. Knight said she had asked a provincial council meeting Thursday in Duncan to try to secure absentee voting rights for servicemen in the school construction referendum.

"But I was told that it was not a matter for the PTA," she said. "If that isn't a matter for the PTA I don't know what is."

MRS. E. E. KNIGHT

Mrs. Knight said McKenzie Avenue PTA made a survey to find why last year's school construction by-law failed in her district.

"We found that many parents had been deprived of their votes," she said. "There were three naval ships out of port and the men on board weren't allowed absentee votes. And the wives of veterans who have Veterans' Land Act homes couldn't vote."

The McKenzie Avenue School area has many veterans and naval residents Mrs. Knight said. It is also one of the worst affected by the shift system.

When we told the admiral (Rear Admiral J. C. Hibbard) how many men were interested in the school vote he said he would co-operate by having as many of them as possible in port," Mrs. Knight said.

It's Lively, Reliable

Metropolitan Owners 'Sold' on Small Car

BY J. T. JONES

What is it about the Nash Metropolitan that gets its owners so excited?

When it first came out, the Metro looked like a moderately successful attempt to give the American public a small car. It had some obvious good points and some glaring bad ones. But the people who bought Metros seemed to get happier every day.

With all this in mind I borrowed one from Plimley's one afternoon to try to find out the secret. And as near as I can figure, it's all in this little car's engaging personality.

A LIVELY CAR

Certainly the Metropolitan is lively. Its reliable 42-horse power Austin engine picks up smoothly and easily in high gear in city driving, and going through the gears it will keep up with most passenger cars. It isn't as sure-footed as many other cars in the same general field, notably the Volkswagen and Morris Minor, but it's better than many larger automobiles.

It's a well-built, well-finished product good-looking, except for a windshield wiper motor which is probably the world's poorest effort for looks or pedigree, and has a distinctive appearance.

Those skirted front fenders Nash loves so well cramp the front wheels cruelly. The turning radius of the Metropolitan is more like the Chevrolet's than it is like any of the small cars. As for seating room, there is lots of space for three in the front and scant room for two in the back, none at all with the top down.

But listen to an owner:

"I had four Morrises before I got this Metropolitan," he says. "And I'd never go back." (I can't say I agree with him there.)

"My Metropolitan rides better and goes faster. Those other English engines seem to labor all the time and you have to use the choke every time you start them." (Score one against the Morris.)

DEALER SERVICE

There's a matter of dealer service in this business too. Metro owners have the well-established Nash organization to provide repairs and parts and locally the same dealer handles Nash and Austin which cover the car parts waterfront.

I'm not wild about the Metro. Its pert air of [illegible] for looks or pedigree. But for people who drive them, use and [illegible] appreciate [illegible] much passenger room [illegible] Packard slogan ing its size and it isn't as [illegible] as it should be, one it could sell millions.

WITH THE PASSING of each year, a great number of facts are added to man's increasing store of knowledge. Not over seventy-five years ago a man of superior intelligence could possess a working knowledge of all of science. Now, however, the realm of the known is so vast that it is necessary for men to specialize in order to master one small but deep corner of scientific knowledge.

Thus we have the physician, who diagnoses disease and prescribes medication and treatment. The pharmacist compounds and dispenses. Both the physician and the pharmacist benefit greatly from the researches of the biologist, the chemist, the physicist, and the physicist, to name but a few. Through the teamwork of the allied sciences, increasingly better medical service for all is assured.

With G. E. Mortimore

Their latest change of plans makes little sense. They still intend to trade "good" books for "undesirable" comics and destroy the comics.

But they are not going to burn the comic books, as they originally planned. They are going to destroy them some other way, because book-burning looks bad.

What on earth difference does it make whether the books are burned, tossed at sea, or thrown into a termites' nest to be eaten? They are still going to be destroyed.

In their concern for the way the books will be destroyed, the "Jaycees" show a curious attitude of mind.

They show themselves to be more worried about appearances than about principles. It seems they are afraid people will notice them dancing around the flames.

Destroying any kind of book—even a trashy one—is a serious act. It is the murder of someone's thoughts (worthless thoughts, perhaps) and the beginning of censorship.

It is a project to be undertaken (if at all) by thinkers and scholars and only after much heart-searching.

I have met several members of the Junior Chamber, and found them amiable persons. They put on a fine B.C. Products Fair (or Canadian Products Fair or World Products Fair, whatever they are going to call it). They're the smartest gardeners who ever sank a trowel in the Inner Harbor turf.

But I am not convinced that the members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce know good books from bad books, or that they have the wisdom to sit in judgement on such matters.

I know I haven't the wisdom for it. That's why I would refuse to have a part in any such project, and if I belonged to an organization that embarked upon it I would resign rather than lend it my support.

That is one man's opinion, but I speak for some others as well.

1. What kind of books, if any, did you read when you were a child?
2. Did you turn out to be a good citizen all the same?
3. If not, why not?
4. What was the last book, of any kind, that you read?
5. Who committed the murder?

Alger Hiss Vows To Clear Name

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Alger Hiss, looking grim and rather haggard but appearing confident, walked to freedom Saturday asserting he was "completely innocent" of charges that he helped communist spies.

A stretch of 3½ years behind the bars of Lewisburg Prison ended with an avowal by the 50-year-old former state department aide that he meant to "vindicate my name" of the stigma of a conviction for perjury. He had denied before a federal grand jury that he never gave state department secrets to Red spies.

Hiss was sentenced to five years but won a parole as provided under the law because of good behavior. He'll have to report monthly to a federal officer for the next year and a half.

CAREFUL REPLY

When he emerged from the prison he was peppered by waiting reporters with questions about his past and future. Hiss carefully framed his answer: - "I am very glad to use this chance," he said, "the first I have had in nearly four years, to reassert my complete innocence of the charges that were brought against me by Whittaker Chambers."

Chambers, formerly a senior editor of Time Magazine accused Hiss of being a member of a Communist Party group. Chambers accused Hiss also of turning over secret state department documents.

At the prison Hiss' wife Priscilla and two lawyer friends walked with him through the main gate. Moments later Hiss was engulfed in waves of reporters and photographers.

He spoke nearly two minutes, then reporters fired questions at him.

Hiss gave no hint as to his future plans. He turned aside questions whether he planned to write a book and what he would say if called again by a congressional committee.

"For nearly four years I have had no opportunity to answer the fantastic inventions that politicians and members of the press have been free to invent about me," Hiss asserted.

Hope Lived Despite Silence

This was a little faster pace than the one at which the Seven Little Sisters traveled.

Teddy, my wife, was waiting at the New York airport. It was a moment of tremendous happiness. I'd last seen her four months before on June 22, as I prepared to go to sea from Callao. Much had happened in that time.

Much Help

I owed a great deal to a great many people for the success of my voyage, indeed I would not have been able to make it if I had not been fortunate enough to raise many friends and meet many people who helped me. First was my friend Werner Woenig, of Milford, Conn. He gave financial help. Then there was Dr. Jose Chiriboga, Ecuador's ambassador to Washington, who arranged introductions I needed so I could find the balsa logs to build the Seven Little Sisters. Henri Kohn, a New Yorker, let me build the raft near his balsa mill at Guayaquil. Duran Ballen, Ecuador's consul-general in New York, introduced me to Ivan Lach, step of the way I needed and found help like that.

American Consul-General Churchill Hutton gave me valuable assistance in Ecuador. The ambassador to Peru, Harold Tittmann, and Consul Bernard F. Heller were ever-helpful in Peru. The entire staff of the Peruvian navy, from Minister Roque Saldias down, were more than willing to help a lone American go against the Pacific. There was Vice Admiral and Chief of Staff Guillermo Tirado and the other Peruvian navy officers who'd stuck with me—Capt. Abraham Woll-Davila, Capt. Saldias, the minister's son; Captain Revedenera, Commandante Alejandro Martinez. There were the Ecuadoreans, working on the river and in the forests, who counseled me about the problems of balsa. There were Governor and Mrs. Lowe . . .

I have a great many debts I can never repay.

Tried Harder

And my wife? She had kept faith in my journey, and her faith had never wavered.

I was now able to learn of her activities on my behalf. Week after week had passed and those on land who were listening for my radio messages heard nothing. Teddy was determined that efforts to get news of me should not lag — that even greater ones should be made.

I owe her a debt for this faith in me. I had told her that I would certainly come back, and she refused to have any doubts.

Before leaving Callao I told the Peruvian Navy I would radio my position at least once a day—at 11 a.m. or 6 p.m. -using the emergency marine wavelengths of 500 and 8364 kilocycles. The navy promised to keep a man on duty 24 hours a day throughout the trip to receive these and any other messages. News would be forwarded to Washington, and sent on to my wife.

Days went by and my radio failed to carry out its end of the bargain. My wife set out on a course of supplementary action. She wrote the U.S. Navy hydrographic office in Washington, so that a notice that I was adrift would be printed in the daily bulletin that goes to shipmasters of the South Pacific. She wrote the National Maritime Union of which I am a member and its affiliates, asking that radio operators in the region I was sailing be requested to keep alert for messages identified by the call letters, 3HTAS, taken from Siete Hermanitas, Spanish for the Seven Little Sisters.

No Alarm

But weeks passed without news of me. Teddy was not alarmed, she insists, but rather thought that enough was not being done to reach me. She wrote the Radio Relay League of America, the "ham" organization which has friends all over the world. She asked that any radio operators in the area where I was sailing be notified. The league responded to her request, sending copies of Teddy's letter to radio amateurs in Honolulu, Tahiti, Rarotonga and Pitcairn Island.

While approaching the main Samoan island of Tutuila, I radioed a request that a boat be sent to show me the way through the reef. I'd sent the request many times before, but my messages had not been received. I had no reason to expect that this one would find a listener.

But on the British island of Rarotonga, 650 miles to the southeast, a "ham" named Doug Cunnold was listening. He was at his set because a copy of my wife's letter had reached still another Rarotonga radio operator named Doug Berry, who had notified Cunnold he should be alert for a message from me. It was through Cunnold's efforts that the information was passed along to Pago Pago.

Governor Lowe sent a ship to search for me and bring me safely to land; my wife's faith had achieved long-range results. When I landed at Hawaii, a woman in the crowd, another "ham," showed me a copy of my wife's letter. There, too, radio sets had been tuned to my wavelength.

Go Again?

For the future I am planning to do some more writing and have an operation for the hernia I suffered in Ecuador. It seems very long ago, the day when I hurled myself against a boat which seemed determined to crush my raft. Many times since returning I have been asked, "Any more raft voyages?" Not right away, certainly. But, knowing myself, I have a feeling that some other project will come up, and I'll go back to assembling balsa logs or making some other long-distance preparations.

My successful return to New York has brought an unexpected problem. Meekie, a cat which could cross the Pacific without once losing her dignity, has turned out to be frightened to death of dogs and cars. But she's boss of our household and in time I hope she will become a seasoned city dweller. Perhaps she needs time to recover from the long trip home.

Governor Lowe's wife gave me a native basket as a cat-carrying case and very where we landed Meekie became the centre of interest. The crowded return journey must have been quite a strain for a ten-month-old cat which had spent four months of her life alone on a raft with a man and a parrot.

Why did I go to sea on the Seven Little Sisters?

Now that it is all over and some of the impressions are beginning to fade, I sometimes ask myself in the night's stillest moments why I built the raft and made the voyage. I am asked this almost daily. To me the answer is not hard to find.

Let me say again what I have tried to make clear before. It was not a stunt - or an adventure either. Unlike the great Kon-Tiki expedition, I wanted to prove no theory. Nor did I wish to discover or set up a formula for others to follow.

Just Personal

To me, built as I am, the trip was much more. All my life I have stuck close to nature and had great faith in nature. I felt I could count on nature and the voyage across the Pacific was a test of myself, and my philosophy. This of course means faith, and my voyage was a test of faith. It was purely a personal affair.

On the Pacific, there were moments when that faith might have been strained. The hardest moment was when illness struck me early in the voyage and I radioed an SOS. It was, indeed, the most difficult moment of my life.

But the happiest moment followed quickly when the pain had gone, and I knew I could go on.

My greatest disappointment came when I found I could not land on American Samoa, the destination I'd selected and had to turn away into the night toward the British islands. And this, too, was followed by a change for the better. For of course the climax, and the greatest pleasure, came with my landing in American Samoa.

Life on the Seven Little Sisters was unpredictable. Moment to moment, battling wind and seas and calms and other problems, I found many sudden changes. Some of these moments brought hardships and others pleasure in the beauty I found around me. Which emerges clearest, now that it is in the past?

At moments of greatest calm, when reflections emerge of their own accord, I recollect most clearly the hours I sailed—alone in all the world—under the most beautiful canopy of stars I have ever seen.

The End

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Birch Trees—(J.L.C., Sooke): If you have reason to suspect that the small trees you bought as paper birches are really the common grey birch you can make sure by rubbing the bark. The chalky witness will rub off the paper birch, but not off the grey. However I don't think any reputable nurseryman would make such a substitution, as his good name is his principal stock in trade.

Actually, for the first three years, the grey birch has whiter bark than the paper birch, and it is only as the tree becomes mature that the latter develops the full silvery beauty of its bark. The grey birch is a poor thing in comparison, but at least it has the virtue of thriving in soil so poor that no other tree would grow.

Another way of telling the two apart is by the dark mark ings. The bark of the paper birch has horizontal black stripe like marks while the grey birch is marked with clearly defined triangular black patches or "mosaic face" as the children call them.

Red Spider Mite—(E.S.P., Victoria): The tiny red creatures which you found on your carnations when you brought them into the house are red spider mites. These are the same pests which are now attacking your potted grapefruit plant and I don't think there is much doubt that the infestation came from the carnations.

Ordinary insecticides aren't much good against this little pest, but there is a preparation called Malathion which gives a good kill. Mix it with water according to the directions on the bottle, and swab it on both sides of the leaves. If you have any trouble in securing the Malathion, try swabbing the webs away with soapy water, then dusting with sulphur.

It is hard to believe that a creature so small as to be almost invisible to the naked eye could do so much damage, but these mites multiply so rapidly and suck the sap so voraciously that the leaves will sicken, turn yellow and die.

Corn Culture — (J.B.B., Nanaimo): Your failure last year was due to sowing your corn too early, before the soil had warmed up. With the cold, wet spring we had, the seed rotted in the ground before it could germinate.

The early Indian had a neat trick for determining when to sow their corn. The squaws would catch themselves a young buck, strip off his G-string, and force him to sit down on the bare earth. If he shivered, it was too early to plant.

If you haven't an Indian handy next spring to test the temperature of your soil, use your hands, or the inside surface of your wrist, the way a young mother tests the bath water for the baby.

If the ground feels cold and clammy, wait until it warms up before sowing. It is always a good idea to shake up the seed in a bag with a pinch or two of mercuric seed dressing, such as Ceresan, which gives some protection against the rot organisms in the soil. This stuff is poisonous, though, so don't smoke on the job, keep your hands away from your mouth or eyes, and wash them thoroughly after handling the treated seed.

If it is important to your ego to pick a few ears of corn a week or so ahead of your next door neighbor, you can use cloches, Hotcaps or even upended jam jars over each seed. Place the Hotcaps or whatever you use in position a week before sowing the seed so they will trap the sun and warm up the soil.

PORT ALBERNI—The herring fleet is in Port Alberni for the second week end of the season with reports of slow fishing in Barkley Sound and vicinity.

The fleet of about 35 boats, including packers, seiners, tenders, and take-off boats, arrived Friday and most of the 250-odd men are to return to their homes in the Vancouver-New Westminster area for the week end.

Several packers are in port, but the small number of fish does not warrant a trip to the processing plants on the Mainland.

Blind Attorney Conquers Barrier

MOSCOW (Idaho) (AP) — Harry Busse Turner, LLB, BA and stone blind, left a professor here today and walked into his dark world as one of Idaho's newest attorneys.

Without Braille or guide dog he learned a law lesson in five years at the University of Idaho, passed the bar examination and became the most inspirational student the school has seen in years.

He was surrounded by close friends who read him his lessons, and even took him on dates because the handsome 27-year-old, five feet nine Turner had an engaging personality and a quick wit.

He has left them behind now and returned to Twin Falls, where the wonderful world he had just begun to know suddenly went black in 1932.

His mother had brought home a surprise from town, a package just for him, bound in tight cord. Harry ran for a butcher knife, slipped it under the cord and pulled up hard.

The knife snicked through the string and slashed into his eyes. He never saw what was in the box.

He was sent off to a school for the blind, but hated it and resented the handicap.

At 12, his father took him to the regular junior high school in Twin Falls and Harry was accepted with some misgivings. But he became a whiz at mathematics.

Fortunately, Curt Turner was pretty well off and he could afford to send his boy to college. Harry enrolled at Utah State in political science and got elected to the student council.

Friends read to him daily. He graduated with a C-plus average, though he had to take some courses twice, then licked the bar exam.

Harry Turner had made the grade.

FIFTY YEARS' EVOLUTION IN BETTER HEARING

Today, if you need hearing help you may use a small, light instrument to increase, in your ear, essential sounds. Fifty years ago, very little to help you. Now there are two PARAVOX All-Transistor Hearing Aids that are helping hundreds to hear better again.

Why don't you, if your hearing is failing, try one? It may bring new joy, new happiness to you. It will cost you nothing to find out if you can be helped.

Soldier, Statesman, Author, Artist, Bricklayer

For more than half a century the voice of Sir Winston Churchill has been heard around the world, sometimes as a prophet of impending war, sometimes as a critic of domestic issues, for long years as inspired leader of a beleaguered island, always as an advocate of close co-operation between the free nations of the western world. As his 80th birthday nears, his energies and talents find outlet in painting, writing and bricklaying. Always a rebel against what he considered wrong, he saw realization of his dream of Commonwealth-U.S. partnership in the Second World War. First Lord of the Admiralty for part of the First World War and prime minister during the Second World War, he personifies British determination and perseverance. These pictures show Sir Winston at various stages of his colorful career. Centre, he is wartime prime minister. In other photos he is shown as honorary doctor of laws at the University of Edinburgh; in the siren suit he made famous in the Second World War; painting near Calais, France; in the uniform of air commodore of the RAF; just after he had flown across the English Channel in 1914; as an observer during British-French army manoeuvres in France in 1910; as he appeared on his 1952 visit to Ottawa, and as he won the 1951 general election.

Island Group Backs Plan

Hospitals' 'Sweep' Proposed for B.C.

NANAIMO — Legalized hospital sweepstakes organized on a province-wide scale won a resounding vote of approval from delegates attending the all-Island meeting of B.C. Hospitals here Saturday.

Officials, seriously concerned over the grave problem of hospital finances, came out in unanimous favor of the establishment of a miniature-style Irish Sweep for B.C.

The question will now be referred to the B.C. Hospital Association and from there it will go to the annual convention.

ENDORSATION ASKED

The resolution was first passed by the hospitals' women's auxiliaries which asked for endorsation from the original meeting.

The Irish Sweep, which collects thousands of dollars for Irish Hospitals every year, is run on the system of one-quarter total ticket sales going to the hospitals and the remaining three-quarters being awarded in prizes.

At the same meeting Dr. Larry Giovando, MLA for Nanaimo, advocated a dual hospital system for the province.

He said there were many chronic cases in beds meant for acute cases. Convalescent hospitals should be opened for the chronic cases enabling seriously ill people to benefit from the expensive equipment that hospitals now have.

Nanaimo Salutes Daring Pioneers

BY ALEC MERRIMAN
Colonist Staff Reporter

NANAIMO—Aunts and uncles, nephews and nieces, dozens of cousins, and distant relatives galore met here yesterday — some for the first time.

They were among the 300 descendants gathered to see a re-enactment of the landing 100 years ago of the "Princess Royal" pioneers.

Three thousand others mingled with them to see Nanaimo actors and actresses take the parts of the tiny band of travel-weary pioneers who stepped ashore on the same Pioneer Rock 100 years ago to the hour—11 a.m., November 27, 1854.

It was an emotional pageant and many an old-timer's eye and youngster's, too, filled with tears as the "pioneers" landed in three whalers.

But just as emotional and impressive was a gathering of descendants in the Eagles Hall after the landing. There many a relative, who had not known the other existed, met for the first time, united in the common

Hundreds at Sea Fighting for Lives

LONDON (AP)—The worst storms in 30 years piled up a death toll, believed to be more than 30, in a long list of shipping disasters Sunday and spread floods and havoc over much of Britain.

Hundreds of seamen fought for their lives in crippled ships.

Seven men lay trapped in the wallowing wreck of the lightship South Goodwin. Shrieking winds ripped the lightship from its moorings and tossed it on the Goodwin sands, notorious graveyard for English Channel shipping.

An American air force helicopter crew snatched one man from the wreck in a daredevil rescue mission before rising tides closed over it last night. Ships stood by with oxygen torches ready to cut into the hulk today if the winds abate, but the weatherman forecast more gales.

Seven more seamen were feared dead aboard the fore section of the 20,125-ton Liberian tanker, World Concord, snapped in two by boiling seas off the Welsh coast. Earlier, 35 men had been rescued off the stern half after eight hours of peril.

Fears grew for 14 men aboard the 1,600-ton motorship, Rambler Rose, missing in the Lands End area where a ship was seen to sink Friday night.

Three seamen were believed killed in an explosion that ripped through the 9,829-ton Norwegian tanker Olov Ringdal in the Welsh port of Swansea. Fifteen were injured.

Wartime mines ripped free from rusty cables, bringing fresh hazards to the men trying to ride out the storm. Frantic SOS messages crackled out from the North Sea to the Atlantic.

Inland, rising floodwaters brought chaos to 18 counties in southwest England and the midlands. Anxious coast guards stood by the seawalls as the raging seas lashed higher at each tide.

Deserters Total 600

BY TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Deserters from Canada's armed services totaled 600 as of September 30.

Announcing this figure yesterday, national defense headquarters noted that the total is less than 1 per cent of Canada's enlisted strength of 113,000.

The search for deserters goes on without letup. Provincial and municipal police and the RCMP co-operate with the armed services in trying to track them down.

Adrift 6,400 Miles

Wife's Faith Never Failed

This is the last in a series of articles by William Willis, 61-year-old New Yorker who sailed alone on a raft 6,400 miles across the Pacific from Peru to Pago Pago. Today: A wife's faith.

BY WILLIAM WILLIS

NEW YORK (NANA)—The docks of Pago Pago harbor were crowded as the boat that would take me to Apia, on British Samoa, approached. After having crawled 6,400 miles across the Pacific on a raft, covering only a few miles during many of the 115 days, I was now starting a much longer journey that would be ended when my plane landed in New York in less than a week.

The raft would stay in Samoa, so "present and future generations may see it" near where it landed at Pago Pago, as Richard Barrett Lowe, governor of the American Samoas, had been kind enough to write me formally.

I shook hands with the governor and his wife, unable to express my thanks for their kindness except to say, "I have found a home with you." My eyes were on the raft, still lying just where I had left her, as the boat, an inter-island vessel, pulled away. We arrived at Apia in the middle of the night, and I had to rush to make the plane that would take me on to Suva. There I caught a Clipper to Honolulu. After only four hours, it was on to San Francisco, and the same evening, to New York. I left Pago Pago October 20 and landed in New York on the morning of the 24th.

Impish... Restless... and 80 Churchill Still Unpredictable

BY JAMES F. KING

Age has dealt gently with The Old Man and if he has any immediate intention of retiring as prime minister has not confided it to his closest political associates. He enjoys keeping them guessing along with everyone else.

Lady Churchill, his doctor and a few intimate cronies have tried to slow him down where the passing years have failed.

They have a difficult patient. He shuffles when he walks—but then he always did; he slouches and growls a lot—but then he always has; he is stubborn—but he always was.

EDEN GETTING ON

Britons are chuckling over this story going the rounds:

A group of Conservative friends hinted diplomatically to The Old Man that perhaps he should take it easier and give Foreign Secretary Eden his chance now to succeed him as prime minister.

Churchill listened patiently and then grumbled with a twinkle in his eyes:

"Maybe you are right. After all Anthony can't live forever." Eden is 57.

Churchill looks like an old man and he is an old man, but he doggedly refuses to accept any allowances on this count. He can still hold his own in the daily skirmishing in the House of Commons.

Britain has had only two older prime ministers—both in the 19th century. Lord Palmerston died in office at 81; William Ewart Gladstone formed his last government at 82.

Mixed with Churchill's boundless energy is terrific recuperative powers—and a wonderful ability to relax.

Sir Winston likes comfort and good living in the Victorian style. Especially he prides himself as a connoisseur of good food and drink. Champagne is regular with meals; brandy afterwards.

Churchill has said: "I have been brought up and trained to have the utmost contempt for people who get drunk." His own drinking capacity is legendary—and he jokes about it himself sometimes.

Arsenic Cures Nerves

TULSA, Okla. (UP) — A "lonely hearts" widow last night calmly told police she put rat poison in her fourth husband's coffee because he "got on my nerves."

Their recent marriage climaxed a four-month "mail order" romance through a lonely hearts club.

Mrs. Nannie Doss, 49, a smiling, friendly grandmother, had not been questioned here yet about the deaths of two other husbands.

Royal Film Under Fire

LONDON (CP)—There will be changes in the selection of movies for the annual Royal film shows attended by the Queen. Most of Britain's film critics were outraged at this year's choice of MGM's "Beau Brummel," because it showed one royal ancestor going mad and another bursting into tears when refused permission to wed.

The Daily Express quoted the Duke of Edinburgh as saying privately he was "flabbergasted" at this year's poor choice, although the Queen remarked after the showing that the film was beautiful. In one scene of "Beau Brummel," Robert Morley as George III engages in a lunatic hide-and-seek chase through the corridors of Windsor Castle—still a Royal home.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

LESE majesty is what they call the offence: a slur on the dignity of a king or queen. The crime was committed in Victoria recently by pure accident.

A movie preview audience at the Odeon stood up respectfully at the end of the performance, waiting for the National Anthem. The Royal movie flashed on the screen. People stared at it, then rubbed their eyes and stared again.

Something very strange had happened to that film. The pictures of the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh were squashed flat, so that both eminent persons looked two feet tall and five feet wide—exactly like the comic mirrors that you see in carnivals.

The sight of those weird figures strutting across the screen was a stern test of loyalty. It was too much for some members of the audience, even in true-blue Victoria. They broke into grins, sniggers and—here and there—guffaws.

Odeon manager Elliott Brown, standing in the lobby to wish his preview guests good night, had not seen the distorted film. And when the people filed by registering various degrees of laughter—he took it as a tribute to the main film.

This was a fine cinamascope production called "Woman's World."

But when Mr. Brown met the other members of his staff, he learned the ghastly truth. The main movie was in cinamascope, but the brief sequence showing the Queen was in ordinary film. Cinamascope films are compressed, and require a special lens to project them.

The projectionist had forgotten to take off his special lens. As a result the Royal movie was thrown on the screen twice as broad as it was high.

Some people were shocked, and kept a straight face. Had Her Majesty been in the theatre, however, she would probably have led a merry chorus of laughter.

The projectionist was lucky. Nothing happened to him. In older times he would have been arrested as a disloyal hound, and thrown into the Bastille for life.

The army issued a stern warning to news photographers about those guns that are to be removed from Albert Head.

"You can photograph the guns," they said, in effect, "but be sure you don't photograph the breech mechanisms. That's secret stuff."

Songs Conquered Long Solitude As Raft Drifted Across Pacific

to yield any fish, a food on which I depended heavily.

As these problems—and the others—arose, I thought each one over as carefully as I could. But, as I reflect with a viewpoint maturing with time, I realize I did not ask myself, "Can this be solved?" but, "How can it be solved?" Perhaps the many different and often difficult jobs I'd done in my life helped me approach each day of the voyage in this way. But I do know that being alone with my raft, the sea and the sky, I had no other choice but to find a way to deal with emergencies.

Felt Surer

I was confident, from the beginning, that I could make the voyage. But as each problem was surmounted I became that much more confident that I could overcome the next.

In preparing to deal with as many of these difficulties as I could predict, I had to consider that I might meet storms far more severe than the worst blow I did encounter, a 50-mile-an-hour gale. I was within a hurricane area, with the season for the big blows coming on. My masts and bowsprit might be broken; the cabin could be washed off, and even the deck stripped by high seas. I had to consider that my canoe—my "lifeboat"—might be torn loose or smashed early in such a blow.

In the event of such disaster, I planned to lash myself to the raft's large bottom logs and try to survive in the spray and seas. True, I would be adrift. But by devoting all my energy to salvaging a little food and water I felt sure I would be able to keep alive and drift for a long time, with some little hope of reaching an island. For this reason, I told my wife before the Peruvian minesweeper San Martin towed me out from Callao that she should not give up hope, even if years passed and I were given up for lost by the world.

Good Energy

I had chosen my foods with the idea particularly in mind that I was testing my ability to survive on the open ocean. My experience with the selection I made may be of some interest, for while I lost some weight I was able to handle the almost incessant work the raft demanded of me.

Each morning I ate two tablespoons of canihua, the cereal that grows only at high altitudes and which is used by Andean Indians. I mixed it with enough water to make a thick paste. Gradually increasing the amounts as my stomach got used to canihua's concentrated food value, I also ate it at noon, in the evening and during the night whenever I felt hungry. It tastes much like flour. I carried 50 pounds of it.

I also carried 50 pounds of barley flour, which I sometimes used in place of the canihua. And I had 50 pounds of chancaca, an unrefined sugar used by the South American Indians. Looking like black paste and tasting like candy, chancaca was kept always handy in a jar. It gave me energy whenever I needed it, and I ate a quarter of a pound or more whenever I felt the need.

Raw Fish

Finally, I ate fish—except, of course, during the long spells when the sea seemed to be empty of life. When my stoves failed, I marinated the raw meat with a little lemon juice and, on several occasions, a little rum. By the time my supply of these flavorings was exhausted, I was accustomed to eating the raw flesh.

I found these foods completely satisfactory. I ate only when I was hungry—and I believe this is important, for otherwise such a concentrated, high-energy diet might have defied digestion. But even though I had a good deal of the foods left when I landed, I did not suffer hunger. My strength was sustained. I think I could have gone on, with this diet, for a much longer time.

Nor did I suffer the pangs of thirst, even when my fresh-water ration was reduced to about a cup a day after my water cans leaked. I knew I would have to rely on salt water to eke out the fresh for a period, the length of which I could not even guess. When I first dipped my cup over the side, I implanted a particular thought in my mind. The salt water, I told myself firmly, would taste good and bring only beneficial effects. Then, and in all the days that followed, I made a point of draining my cup every time, and never throwing a drop away.

As the hour approached for me to leave Samoa, I reflected on a phase of the voyage—another survival problem—on which I have not dwelt before. It came to my mind as I moved through the crowded schedule arranged by the Samoan people and government officials. I was constantly with large groups or crowds; on the raft, I had been alone for four months.

Big Change

One day a man may be in a big city, like Callao. I reflected and the next have nothing but sea and sky around him. One day a man is a protected member of a crowded civilization; the next he is alone and nature holds him in the hollow of her hand—one twist of a rising wave, and he is submerged. In such a situation, particularly when it is prolonged, dealing with the problem of solitude, I now recognized, is an important element in surviving.

If a solitary man can't adjust himself to being alone, he will devour himself and his mind will crack. Man is not made to be alone, I learned vividly many years ago, when I hunted in Alaska, and saw solitary prospectors "taken out" of the wilderness.

To most persons, both in the United States and South America, with whom I talked before beginning my voyage, my being alone for such a long time seemed the most dangerous prospect of all. Tossing on the seas, with no one to see or speak to—the very idea seemed to frighten them.

Two Answers

But my solitary journey passed, as the journey of any man facing the survival problem must pass. How did I stand it? Didn't it bother me? I have been asked these questions many times.

First, I have always found a great deal of pleasure in being alone with nature. Indeed, this is my nature. The prospect of being alone did not worry me, and it did not trouble me severely.

Second, there were times when, as I reflect, it seems the solitude did begin to press down on me—to overwhelm me. At such times, I did a particular thing. It was not that I felt a problem emerging, against which I would make a defense, it seems to have been more at the subconscious level. But it worked.

Sure Tonic

When there was loneliness, I simply started singing. Many a night I sang every song I knew, and loudly. This was an unfailing tonic. I found it could produce, almost immediately, a feeling of well-being, and, if such a thing is possible, a sense of communion with nature and whatever we associate with nature in the way of the sublime and divine.

(Final exciting chapter tomorrow.)

George Wood Dies at Home

A resident of Victoria for 50 years, George Wood died Thursday at his home at 1051 Hillside.

Mr. Wood was born at Langdon, Staffordshire. He had been associated with the B.C. Electric Co. for many years.

He leaves his widow, Alice, and son John, at home; a son Elbert, at 1644 Gladstone; a daughter, Mrs. W. Rule of Vancouver; five grandchildren and one great-grandchild; and three sisters, Mrs. J. Knowles of Victoria, Mrs. L. Burton of Vancouver, and Mrs. J. Lavatt of Doncaster, England.

Funeral services will be held at 3.15 p.m. Monday at Sands' funeral chapel, followed by cremation at Royal Oak.

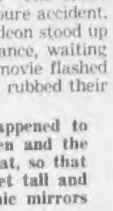
Plant Thrives In Worst Soil



BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Of all the hundreds of rock garden plants grown, I believe the Sempervivums or Houseleeks are the easiest of all to manage. There must be scarcely a rock garden anywhere where at least one kind is not found, and yet, with all their ease of culture, they are not always seen to the best advantage. To give of their best, to produce the tight colonies of highly colored rosettes so much admired, they must be grown in the poorest soil possible. They revel in arid, sun-baked spots where hardly anything else would grow.

ON TIN ROOF

It has become a habit of mine, when describing some plant extremely easy to grow, to use the expression—"I believe it would even grow on a tin roof." Believe it or not, I have actually seen the common hens and chickens houseleek growing in the little bit of dirt collected in the troughs of a corrugated tin roof! As a matter of fact, this houseleek was often planted on cottage roofs in earlier days, in the belief that it would ward off lightning. It was once used, too, as a cure for earache, the leaves being boiled and inserted hot in the ear.

A few years ago, I was given half a dozen specimens of Sempervivum tectorum triste, which is a particularly good form of the common hens and chickens.

BIG BUT DRAB

I planted these in a number of different spots in my rock garden, some on bare ledges of rock, with just a handful of soil and grit, some in pockets of good soil and a few crammed into vertical cracks in the rocks. The ones in good soil multiplied rapidly and each individual rosette was larger and more open, but they lost most of their characteristic color and were almost green. The specimens in the poorer situations didn't spread as much, but the color was deep and rich.

It is a mistake to coddle the houseleeks, then. Put them where they have to send out their long, thin roots into the rocks in search of moisture, and they will reward you with their best colors and habits. The cobweb houseleek, Sempervivum arachnoideum, and its varieties look particularly well if planted vertically, in a crevice between two rocks. There they will spread into large colonies, tightly crammed together, looking most attractive with their silvery "cobwebs" stretching between the points of their leaves.

SET DOWN

Ancient Beer Tastes Awful

SANDWICH, England (AP) — Eighteen bottles of beer believed to be 1,800 years old have washed ashore here in the last week.

Ivor Noel-Hulme, an archaeologist, fixed the approximate age of the brew by examining the old hand-made bottles. The beer is believed to have come from an ancient wreck finally broken up by the sea.

"People who have tried it," Noel-Hulme reported, "say it is horrible."

With G. E. Mortimore

LESE majesty is what they call the offence: a slur on the dignity of a king or queen. The crime was committed in Victoria recently by pure accident.

A movie preview audience at the Odeon stood up respectfully at the end of the performance, waiting for the National Anthem. The Royal movie flashed on the screen. People stared at it, then rubbed their eyes and stared again.

Something very strange had happened to that film. The pictures of the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh were squashed flat, so that both eminent persons looked two feet tall and five feet wide—exactly like the comic mirrors that you see in carnivals.

The sight of those weird figures strutting across the screen was a stern test of loyalty. It was too much for some members of the audience, even in true-blue Victoria. They broke into grins, sniggers and—here and there—guffaws.

Odeon manager Elliott Brown, standing in the lobby to wish his preview guests good night, had not seen the distorted film. And when the people filed by registering various degrees of laughter—he took it as a tribute to the main film.

This was a fine cinamascope production called "Woman's World."

But when Mr. Brown met the other members of his staff, he learned the ghastly truth. The main movie was in cinamascope, but the brief sequence showing the Queen was in ordinary film. Cinamascope films are compressed, and require a special lens to project them.

The projectionist had forgotten to take off his special lens. As a result the Royal movie was thrown on the screen twice as broad as it was high.

Some people were shocked, and kept a straight face. Had Her Majesty been in the theatre, however, she would probably have led a merry chorus of laughter.

The projectionist was lucky. Nothing happened to him. In older times he would have been arrested as a disloyal hound, and thrown into the Bastille for life.

The army issued a stern warning to news photographers about those guns that are to be removed from Albert Head.

"You can photograph the guns," they said, in effect, "but be sure you don't photograph the breech mechanisms. That's secret stuff."

The guns are roughly 40 years old.

Songs Conquered Long Solitude As Raft Drifted Across Pacific

to yield any fish, a food on which I depended heavily.

As these problems—and the others—arose, I thought each one over as carefully as I could. But, as I reflect with a viewpoint maturing with time, I realize I did not ask myself, "Can this be solved?" but, "How can it be solved?" Perhaps the many different and often difficult jobs I'd done in my life helped me approach each day of the voyage in this way. But I do know that being alone with my raft, the sea and the sky, I had no other choice but to find a way to deal with emergencies.

Felt Surer

I was confident, from the beginning, that I could make the voyage. But as each problem was surmounted I became that much more confident that I could overcome the next.

In preparing to deal with as many of these difficulties as I could predict, I had to consider that I might meet storms far more severe than the worst blow I did encounter, a 50-mile-an-hour gale. I was within a hurricane area, with the season for the big blows coming on. My masts and bowsprit might be broken; the cabin could be washed off, and even the deck stripped by high seas. I had to consider that my canoe—my "lifeboat"—might be torn loose or smashed early in such a blow.

In the event of such disaster, I planned to lash myself to the raft's large bottom logs and try to survive in the spray and seas. True, I would be adrift. But by devoting all my energy to salvaging a little food and water I felt sure I would be able to keep alive and drift for a long time, with some little hope of reaching an island. For this reason, I told my wife before the Peruvian minesweeper San Martin towed me out from Callao that she should not give up hope, even if years passed and I were given up for lost by the world.

Good Energy

I had chosen my foods with the idea particularly in mind that I was testing my ability to survive on the open ocean. My experience with the selection I made may be of some interest, for while I lost some weight I was able to handle the almost incessant work the raft demanded of me.

Each morning I ate two tablespoons of canihua, the cereal that grows only at high altitudes and which is used by Andean Indians. I mixed it with enough water to make a thick paste. Gradually increasing the amounts as my stomach got used to canihua's concentrated food value, I also ate it at noon, in the evening and during the night whenever I felt hungry. It tastes much like flour. I carried 50 pounds of it.

I also carried 50 pounds of barley flour, which I sometimes used in place of the canihua. And I had 50 pounds of chancaca, an unrefined sugar used by the South American Indians. Looking like black paste and tasting like candy, chancaca was kept always handy in a jar. It gave me energy whenever I needed it, and I ate a quarter of a pound or more whenever I felt the need.

Raw Fish

Finally, I ate fish—except, of course, during the long spells when the sea seemed to be empty of life. When my stoves failed, I marinated the raw meat with a little lemon juice and, on several occasions, a little rum. By the time my supply of these flavorings was exhausted, I was accustomed to eating the raw flesh.

I found these foods completely satisfactory. I ate only when I was hungry—and I believe this is important, for otherwise such a concentrated, high-energy diet might have defied digestion. But even though I had a good deal of the foods left when I landed, I did not suffer hunger. My strength was sustained. I think I could have gone on, with this diet, for a much longer time.

Nor did I suffer the pangs of thirst, even when my fresh-water ration was reduced to about a cup a day after my water cans leaked. I knew I would have to rely on salt water to eke out the fresh for a period, the length of which I could not even guess. When I first dipped my cup over the side, I implanted a particular thought in my mind. The salt water, I told myself firmly, would taste good and bring only beneficial effects. Then, and in all the days that followed, I made a point of draining my cup every time, and never throwing a drop away.

As the hour approached for me to leave Samoa, I reflected on a phase of the voyage—another survival problem—on which I have not dwelt before. It came to my mind as I moved through the crowded schedule arranged by the Samoan people and government officials. I was constantly with large groups or crowds; on the raft, I had been alone for four months.

Big Change

One day a man may be in a big city, like Callao, I reflected and the next have nothing but sea and sky around him. One day a man is a protected member of a crowded civilization; the next he is alone and nature holds him in the hollow of her hand—one twist of a rising wave, and he is submerged. In such a situation, particularly when it is prolonged, dealing with the problem of solitude, I now recognized, is an important element in surviving.

If a solitary man can't adjust himself to being alone, he will devour himself and his mind will crack. Man is not made to be alone, I learned vividly many years ago, when I hunted in Alaska, and saw solitary prospectors "taken out" of the wilderness.

To most persons, both in the United States and South America, with whom I talked before beginning my voyage, my being alone for such a long time seemed the most dangerous prospect of all. Tossing on the seas, with no one to see or speak to—the very idea seemed to frighten them.

Two Answers

But my solitary journey passed, as the journey of any man facing the survival problem must pass. How did I stand it? Didn't it bother me? I have been asked these questions many times.

I have been able to find two answers.

First, I have always found a great deal of pleasure in being alone with nature. Indeed, this is my nature. The prospect of being alone did not worry me, and it did not trouble me severely.

Second, there were times when, as I reflect, it seems the solitude did begin to press down on me—to overwhelm me. At such times, I did a particular thing. It was not that I felt a problem emerging, against which I would make a defense, it seems to have been more at the subconscious level. But it worked.

Sure Tonic

When there was loneliness, I simply started singing. Many a night I sang every song I knew, and loudly. This was an unfailing tonic. I found it could produce, almost immediately, a feeling of well-being, and, if such a thing is possible, a sense of communion with nature and whatever we associate with nature in the way of the sublime and divine.

(Final exciting chapter tomorrow.)

George Wood Dies at Home

A resident of Victoria for 50 years, George Wood died Thursday at his home at 1051 Hillside.

Mr. Wood was born at Langdon, Staffordshire. He had been associated with the B.C. Electric Co. for many years.

He leaves his widow, Alice, and son John, at home; a son Elbert, at 1644 Gladstone; a daughter, Mrs. W. Rule of Vancouver; five grandchildren and one great-grandchild; and three sisters, Mrs. J. Knowles of Victoria, Mrs. L. Burton of Vancouver, and Mrs. J. Lavatt of Doncaster, England.

Funeral services will be held at 3.15 p.m. Monday at Sands' funeral chapel, followed by cremation at Royal Oak.

CPR Considers Third Liner

LIVERPOOL, England (Reuters) — The Canadian Pacific steamship line is considering building a third big liner, Alan C. Macdonald, managing director of the company, announced here.

The 22,500-ton Empress of Britain is to be launched on the Clyde next June, and a sister ship will be started next month, each at a cost of $15,400,000.

Garden Notes

Plant Thrives In Worst Soil

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Of all the hundreds of rock garden plants grown, I believe the Sempervivums or Houseleeks are the easiest of all to manage. There must be scarcely a rock garden anywhere where at least one kind is not found, and yet, with all their ease of culture, they are not always seen to the best advantage. To give of their best, to produce the tight colonies of highly colored rosettes so much admired, they must be grown in the poorest soil possible. They revel in arid, sun-baked spots where hardly anything else would grow.

ON TIN ROOF

It has become a habit of mine, when describing some plant extremely easy to grow, to use the expression—"I believe it would even grow on a tin roof." Believe it or not, I have actually seen the common hens and chickens houseleek growing in the little bit of dirt collected in the troughs of a corrugated tin roof! As a matter of fact, this houseleek was often planted on cottage roofs in earlier days, in the belief that it would ward off lightning. It was once used, too, as a cure for earache, the leaves being boiled and inserted hot in the ear.

A few years ago, I was given half a dozen specimens of Sempervivum tectorum triste, which is a particularly good form of the common hens and chickens.

BIG BUT DRAB

I planted these in a number of different spots in my rock garden, some on bare ledges of rock, with just a handful of soil and grit, some in pockets of good soil and a few crammed in to vertical cracks in the rocks. The ones in good soil multiplied rapidly and each individual rosette was larger and more open, but they lost most of their characteristic color and were almost green. The specimens in the poorer situations didn't spread as much, but the color was deep and rich.

It is a mistake to coddle the houseleeks, then. Put them where they have to send out their long, thin roots into the rocks in search of moisture, and they will reward you with their best colors and habits. The cobweb houseleek, Sempervivum arachnoideum, and its variety, look particularly well if planted vertically, in a crevice between two rocks. There they will spread into large colonies, tightly crammed together, looking most attractive with their silvery "cobwebs" stretching between the points of their leaves.

SET DOWN

The propagation of the houseleek is simplicity itself. Each parent rosette will produce dozens of little offsets or "chickens" clustered around itself. Simply detach as many of these offsets as are needed and set each one down on the soil where you want it to grow, where it will soon anchor itself by sending out its thread-like roots. The rarer kinds are best planted up in small pots of sandy soil with a surfacing of stone chips, and kept in the coldframe until rooted.

Soldier, Statesman, Author, Artist, Bricklayer

For more than half a century the voice of Sir Winston Churchill has been heard around the world, sometimes as a prophet of impending war, sometimes as a critic of domestic issues, for long years as inspired leader of a beleaguered island, always as an advocate of close co-operation between the free nations of the western world. As his 80th birthday nears, his energies and talents find outlet in painting, writing and bricklaying. Always a rebel against what he considered wrong, he saw realization of his dream of Commonwealth-U.S. partnership in the Second World War. First Lord of the Admiralty for part of the First World War and prime minister during the Second World War, he personifies British determination and perseverance. These pictures show Sir Winston at various stages of his colorful career. Centre, he is wartime prime minister. In other photos he is shown as honorary doctor of laws at the University of Edinburgh; in the siren suit he made famous in the Second World War; painting near Calais, France; in the uniform of air commodore of the RAF; just after he had flown across the English Channel in 1914; as an observer during British-French army manoeuvres in France in 1910; as he appeared on his 1952 visit to Ottawa, and as he won the 1951 general election.

Island Group Backs Plan

Hospitals' 'Sweep' Proposed for B.C.

NANAIMO — Legalized hospital sweepstakes organized on a province-wide scale won a resounding vote of approval from delegates attending the all-Island meeting of B.C. Hospitals here Saturday.

Officials, seriously concerned over the grave problem of hospital finances, came out in unanimous favor of the establishment of a miniature-style Irish Sweep for B.C.

The question will now be referred to the B.C. Hospital Association and from there it will go to the annual convention.

ENDORSATION ASKED

The resolution was first passed by the hospitals' women's auxiliaries which asked for endorsation from the original meeting.

The Irish Sweep, which collects thousands of dollars for Irish Hospitals every year, is run on the system of one-quarter total ticket sales going to the hospitals and the remaining three-quarters being awarded in prizes.

At the same meeting Dr. Larry Giovando, MLA for Nanaimo, advocated a dual hospital system for the province.

He said there were many chronic cases in beds meant for acute cases. Convalescent hospitals should be opened for the chronic cases enabling seriously ill people to benefit from the expensive equipment that hospitals now have.

BULLETINS

TOKYO (UP) — Radio Peiping today rejected a United States protest of the sentencing of 13 Americans as alleged spies as "hysterical outbursts and denials."

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and Nationalist China have substantially agreed on terms of a defense treaty by which American protection will be pledged to Formosa, the Pescadores and possibly some coastal islands held by the Nationalists.

Nanaimo Salutes Daring Pioneers

BY ALEC MERRIMAN
Colonist Staff Reporter

NANAIMO—Aunts and uncles, nephews and nieces, dozens of cousins, and distant relatives galore met here yesterday — some for the first time.

They were among the 300 descendants gathered to see a re-enactment of the landing 100 years ago of the "Princess Royal" pioneers.

Three thousand others mingled with them to see Nanaimo actors and actresses take the parts of the tiny band of travel-weary pioneers who stepped ashore on the same Pioneer Rock 100 years ago to the hour—11 a.m., November 27, 1854.

It was an emotional pageant and many an old-timer's eye and youngster's, too, filled with tears as the "pioneers" landed in three whalers.

But just as emotional and impressive was a gathering of descendants in the Eagles Hall after the landing. There many a relative, who had not known the other existed, met for the first time, united in the common

Ailing Pope Must Rest

VATICAN CITY (UP)—Pope Pius XII, who will be 79 next March, suffered a serious new attack Saturday of the hiccoughs, stomach pains and fatigue which afflicted him last winter. His physician has ordered a period of complete rest.

Hundreds at Sea Fighting for Lives

LONDON (AP)—The worst storms in 30 years piled up a death toll, believed to be more than 30, in a long list of shipping disasters Sunday and spread floods and havoc over much of Britain.

Hundreds of seamen fought for their lives in crippled ships.

Seven men lay trapped in the wallowing wreck of the lightship South Goodwin. Shrieking winds ripped the lightship from its moorings and tossed it on the Goodwin sands, notorious graveyard for English Channel shipping.

An American air force helicopter crew snatched one man from the wreck in a daredevil rescue mission before rising tides closed over it last night. Ships stood by with oxygen torches ready to cut into the bulk today if the winds abate, but the weatherman forecast more gales.

Seven more seamen were feared dead aboard the fore section of the 20,125-ton Liberian tanker, World Concord, snapped in two by boiling seas off the Welsh coast. Earlier, 35 men had been rescued off the stern half after eight hours of peril.

Fears grew for 14 men aboard the 1,600-ton motorship, Rambler Rose, missing in the Lands End area where a ship was seen to sink Friday night.

Three seamen were believed killed in an explosion that ripped through the 9,829-ton Norwegian tanker Olov Ringdal in the Welsh port of Swansea. Fifteen were injured.

Wartime mines ripped free from rusty cables, bringing fresh hazards to the men trying to ride out the storm. Frantic SOS messages crackled out from the North Sea to the Atlantic.

Inland, rising floodwaters brought chaos to 18 counties in southwest England and the midlands. Anxious coast guards stood by the seawalls as the raging seas lashed higher at each tide.

Adrift 6,400 Miles

Wife's Faith Never Failed

This is the last in a series of articles by William Willis, 61-year-old New Yorker who sailed alone on a raft 6,400 miles across the Pacific from Peru to Pago Pago. Today: A wife's faith.

BY WILLIAM WILLIS

NEW YORK (NANA)—The docks of Pago Pago harbor were crowded as the boat that would take me to Apia, on British Samoa, approached. After having crawled 6,400 miles across the Pacific on a raft, covering only a few miles during many of the 115 days, I was now starting a much longer journey that would be ended when my plane landed in New York in less than a week.

The raft would stay in Samoa, so "present and future generations may see it" near where it landed at Pago Pago, as Richard Barrett Lowe, governor of the American Samoas, had been kind enough to write me formally.

I shook hands with the governor and his wife, unable to express my thanks for their kindness except to say, "I have found a home with you." My eyes were on the raft, still lying just where I had left her, as the boat, an inter-island vessel, pulled away. We arrived at Apia in the middle of the night, and I had to rush to make the plane that would take me on to Suva. There I caught a Clipper to Honolulu. After only four hours, it was on to San Francisco, and the same evening, to New York. I left Pago Pago October 20 and landed in New York on the morning of the 24th.

Impish... Restless... and 80 Churchill Still Unpredictable

BY JAMES F. KING

Age has dealt gently with The Old Man and if he has any immediate intention of retiring as prime minister has not confided it to his closest political associates. He enjoys keeping them guessing along with everyone else.

Lady Churchill, his doctor and a few intimate cronies have tried to slow him down where the passing years have failed.

They have a difficult patient. He shuffles when he walks—but then he always did; he slouches and growls a lot—but then he always has; he is stubborn—but he always was.

[illegible] CRITICISM

Britons are chuckling over this story going the rounds:

A group of Conservative friends hinted diplomatically to The Old Man that perhaps he should take it easier and give Foreign Secretary Eden his chance now to succeed him as prime minister.

Churchill listened patiently and then grumbled with a twinkle in his eyes:

Churchill looks like an old man and he is an old man, but he doggedly refuses to accept any allowances on this count. He can still hold his own in the daily skirmishing in the House of Commons.

Britain has had only two older prime ministers—both in the 19th century. Lord Palmerston died in office at 81; William Ewart Gladstone formed his last government at 82.

Mixed with Churchill's boundless energy is terrific recuperative powers—and a wonderful ability to relax.

Sir Winston likes comfort and good living in the Victorian style. Especially he prides himself as a connoisseur of good food and drink. Champagne is regular with meals; brandy afterwards.

Churchill has said: "I have been brought up and trained to have the utmost contempt for people who get drunk." His own drinking capacity is legendary—and he jokes about it himself sometimes.

Arsenic Cures Nerves

TULSA, Okla. (UP) — A "lonely hearts" widow last night calmly told police she put rat poison in her fourth husband's coffee because he "got on my nerves."

Their recent marriage climaxed a four-month "mail order" romance through a lonely hearts club.

Mrs. Nannie Doss, 49, a smiling, friendly grandmother, had not been questioned here yet about the deaths of two other husbands.

Royal Film Under Fire

LONDON (CP)—There will be changes in the selection of movies for the annual Royal film shows attended by the Queen. Most of Britain's film critics were outraged at this year's choice of MGM's "Beau Brummel," because it showed one royal ancestor going mad and another bursting into tears when refused permission to wed.

The Daily Express quoted the Duke of Edinburgh as saying privately he was "flabbergasted" at this year's poor choice, although the Queen remarked after the showing that the film was beautiful. In one scene of "Beau Brummel," Robert Morley as George III engages in a lunatic hide-and-seek chase through the corridors of Windsor Castle—still a Royal home.

BY TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Deserters from Canada's armed services totaled 600 as of September 30.

Announcing this figure yesterday, national defense headquarters noted that the total is less than 1 per cent of Canada's enlisted strength of 113,000.

The search for deserters goes on without letup. Provincial and municipal police and the RCMP co-operate with the armed services in trying to track them down.
